Further Evidence for the Defense in the Great Toronto Murder Case.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—At yesterday afternoon's session of the Hyams' murder trial, Robert B. Preston, clerk for Scully & Co., testified that on the Sunday morning before the death of Willie Wells, he and his father were out for a walk and they went along Colborne street, to see Hyams' warehouse. When they reached the warehouse Wells was inside, and took witness down cellar to show him how they manipulated the top and then took one of the weights off, and put on the other, re-changing them again. When Wells put the heavy weight on again, he only put the nose of the hook in the eye of the weight, and in this condition drew it up, until witness drew attention to it, when Willie let it down and left it.

As far as he could see, Willie did not before they left the cellar. On the Wednesday after Willie Wells' death, witness, in company with Tailor White and a man called Crone, made experiments to see if the weight would go into the shaft if the hook were attach ed to the eye of the hook, as he had last seen it when in the warehouse on Sunday. Robert O. Preston, father of the witness, corroborated this evidence as to the Sunday walk to the Colborne street warehouse, and to his son going into the building and theeting a young man there, to whom his son introduced

The document was drawn up by Attorney C. S. Ingalls, of Morenci, and was duly signed, witnessed and acknowledged. It seems that Fuller and the woman were old-time lovers, having hoed corn and weeded many an odiferous onion patch together in the east, when she was Rachael Baasinger.
