lost her forever!
What a memory it was! How it thrilled him to recall it now! And what a bright, winsome little thing, sweet, witching, defiant Annie Noble was at that time.

But why should all this rise up before him now with such startling vividness?

What had this gentle girl, who was bend-ing so fondly over her blue forget-me-nots, in common with this memory of his boyhood?

He bent forward and gently touched her hand.

Miss Waldemar began to think matters were growing serious.
"I expect there are a great many girls in the world whose lot in life is even harder than hers," she remarked gravely, and then dropped the subject, thinking it would be unwise to betray too much interest in this fair stranger, though she meant to seek her out at an early day, for she had other hopes for Rich.

As Rich had now a good excuse for calling upon pretty Annie Hunting, she surely would not consider him presuming when he had such good tidings to impart. Accordingly, two or three evenings later found him standing before the door of her boarding-house, awaiting admittance. The same weary-looking woman whom he had previously seen answered his ring, but regarded him, he thought, with something of suspicion when he inquired for of suspicion when he inquired for

There was a dainty knot of lace and blue ribbons at her throat, and a blue belt with a mass of bows and ends at her waist which relieved its simplicity, and was vastly becoming to her pure complexion.

"I have some good news for you, Miss Hunting, and presuming upon that fact, I have ventured to call upon you," Rich said, rising to greet her.

Football Player Killed-Resignation of Freedman, President of N. Y.

Toronto, Sept. 29.-It was an off day for the fashionable world at the races today, but the attendance of sportsmen from the United States was extremely large, and a fine card was run off. It was rather a rough day for the favorites, and in the last race, the Dominion Autumn handicap, the bookies made a killing, Eau Claire, a rank outsider, which started at 15 to 1, romping home as she pleased from the best of Hendrie's and Dyment's stables. The track was fast, the weather warm and the ring was quite up to the Woodbine standard. The First race, for 3-year-olds, 61/2 furlongs—Glenwater, 119 (McInerney), 1 tional lacrosse championship yesterday to 3, 1; Allopath, 109 (Alarie), 4 to 1, by defeating the St. Paul team by a 2; Aden, 109 (Minder), 10 to 1, 3. Time, and their eyes met.

She colored scarlet; tears rushed to her eyes and her lips trembled.

"Because—because—oh, Rich——"

"You told me that your name was Annie Hunting!" he cried, stopping her in the middle of her sentence, while he, too, flushed now, and his voice shook with excitement.

"And so it is," she answered: "Annie Hunting Noble. Oh, Rich! my old friend! I see you have guessed it at last'" and her sweet voice died away in a sob.

He reached out and grasped both her hands.

"Why did you leave me to guess it?" he asked, almost sternly. "Why did you not tell me at the outset that I had found my dear little friend of the olden time? How strange that I did not know! How blind I have been—though you have changed so very much. Why did you allow me to go on imagining you to be a stranger—and yet not a stranger, either, for there has been a nameless something about you all the time which has made me feel that somewhere, some time in the dim past, I had known you. My darling, you have hurt me keenly." She lifted a startled glance to him as he said those last words, and the look recalled him to himself.

His face flushed a deep crimson. In his astonishment and excitement at discovering who she really was, he had betrayed the love which had been growing in his heart for her ever since their first meeting on Broadway.

MANUFACTURERS' LEAGUE WIND UP AFFAIRS OF SEASON

Evening of Oct. 7—Trophy To Be Given Then.

The very successful season of the Wholesale Manufacturers' Baseball League will be brought to a close on Tuesday evening, Oct. 7, when the members of the league will hold a banquet to fittingly mark the conclusion of a season of good sport.

A meeting of the league was held last night, when this was decided upon, and the affairs of the league were wound up.

The secretary-treasurer presented his report, which, upon motion of Messrs. Wood and Boss, was adopted. It was upon their motion also that it was decided to hold a banquet. Messrs. Southam and May were instructed to make necessary arrangements for the supper. The mayor will be invited to attend it, and present the trophy to the leaders, the McClary club. Upon motion of Messrs. Baxter and Herrick, the members decided to deposit in the bank the money given to the league by the street railway company, together with the balance on second.

Will Finish With Banquet on hand, and that checks for the amount due each club be issued. The league's property will be handed over to the president of the league to keep until the season opens in 1903.

WITH BOGUS CHECKS

Sharper Disguised as Mechanic Swindles Sarnia Storekeepers.

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 30 .- As the result of the operations of a bogus check sharp here on Saturday evening, David Gray, boot and shoe dealer, is out some $16 and Joseph Kaupp, meat dealer, some $11 50. The man who did the work is described as being 40 or 45 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, weight 160 to 170 pounds, dark mustache. He wore overalls which came up over the chest and fastened with strap around the neck. He also wore a peak cap and dark gray coat. He entered Kaupp's meat shop about 8 o'clock and purchased 65 cents worth of beefsteak. In payment, he tendered a check for $11 50, purporting to be issued by the Doherty Manufacturing Company and signed by Thomas Doherty, president and manager. check was drawn out in favor of Joe Bailey and was stamped with a rubber stamp. Mr. Kaupp gave him the 65 cents worth of meat and $10 85 change. Shortly after 8:30 p.m., the same man called at David Barr's jewelry store and wanted to purchase a ring. He selected a $9 ring and tendered a Doherty Manufacturing Company check for $19 in payment. Mr. Barr questioned the fellow, and he said he was a pattern maker and had been working at the stove works for two weeks. check was drawn on the Traders' Bank. Not satisfied with this, Mr. Barr sent the check over to Cook's Bank to see if it was genuine. Before the young man returned the check man said he would go and gather up his groceries and call on his way back. He has not called yet, however. About 9 o'clock the same individual called at D. Gray's shoe store and bought a pair of shoes, giving Mr. Gray a Doherty Manufacturing Company check for $16 in payment. Mr. Gray gave him the shoes and the change, but found out this morning that the check was bogus when he went to the bank to deposit it. No trace of the swindler has so far been obtained.

VERY MANY PERSONS die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the retreatment. pain and disease.

HORSE-CHESTNUTS TO BURN

Novel Means for Defying Coal Famine Discovered Down East.

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 30. - Some thrifty housewives in the north end of the city have discovered a new fuel, and are quite enthusiastic over it. The housewives are making the most of the crop of horse-chestnuts, and the younger members of the household may be found daily tramping the fields and forests in search of them.

The horse-chestnut fuel is treated to a drying process before it is ready for use. That is, the nuts are scattered over the floor in a warm, dry room, generally the attic, and are allowed to season. A short period of seasoning and the nuts, somewhat shrunken, are anthracite. The drying process causes the sap to evaporate and the meat to harden.

This sort of fuel has by experiment been found to cause a warm fire. It burns briskly and emits much heat, and good cooking has been done seen the finger-marks of the ancient

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseses put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. DWELLINGS OF A VANISHED RACE

Remains of Ancient Homes in Southwest Colorado.

Ruined Castles of Cliff-Dwellers Surrounded by Moats and Fortified Walls.

The region of the extreme southwestern corner of Colorado is a little known and but little explored land. It is nearly 100 miles from any railroad, yet it corners on Arizona, Utah and New Mexico. It is a peculiar country, quite unlike that of the rest of Colorado. It is of no little geological, economical as well as archeological interest. In the latter case it was once the home of the ancient cliff dwellers, whose curious dwellings are found in the hollows of some of the most ro-mantic rock scenery imaginable, while remains of their pottery are scattered far and wide over the land, and fragments of it can be found on almost every bluff and in great quantities in the numerous mounds forming their burying places. In some localities, too. we find relics of a grand building or fortified inclosure, containing once many hundreds of rooms, still standing on a knoll in a wide river meadow or poned until tomorrow night. It is canon. The ruined remains of these very desirable that it be largely atmoats and rude fortified walls, remind us of some of the ruined Norman castles we have seen in the old coun-

BANDS OF NAVAJOS. The picturesque and wild character of the country is enchanced by meeting with bands of gally-blanketed Navajo Indians followed by their bleating flocks of goats and sheep. These primitive features are in keeping with the character of the scenery It is a land of wild desolation, of rocks of various colors, red, pink, green and gray, sculptured by erosion into all sorts of grotesque and picturesque forms, fortresses, isolated castellated rocks, rocks pinnacled like cathedral spires, and long sweeps of monotonous plateaux, varied by the uprise of a lofty comb of tilted rock like the dorsal fin of a fish rising high above the surface and traceable as far as eye can reach, known as the "Great Hog-

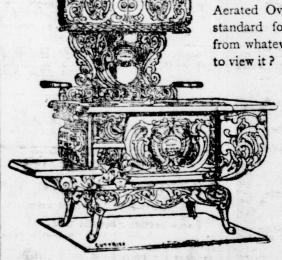

In the distance a pinnacled cone of volcanic rock rises in a vertical cliff 1.800 feet above the level of the plateaux, known as Ship Rock or Needles, and in the extreme distance north and south, are peculiar and strange little isolated groups of volvanic mountains, appearing like islands on the great plateau plain. These are of typical laccolitic origin. and structures. These lone islets are all that break the monotony of the ocean of plateaux extending from Colorado into Utah and Arizona.

WORK OF CLIFF DWELLERS. At Aztec, along the river, we have a fine evidence of the past work of the cliff dwellers in the remains of an old fortress or fortified camp in the river bottom. The ruins stand conspicuously on the top of a knoll of sandstone. Around the rim of this in a semi-circle the ruined buildings are formed, the semi-circle being about 400 yards long. All the little rooms and cubby holes are close together, culminating in 3 dry and almost if not fully as hard as more pretentious building or central tower, whose ruins are about 40 feet high. This was probably the citadel where the chief lived. The ordinary rooms are about six by eight feet, made of loose stones and daubed inside with plaster, on which are still inhabitants. The roof or ceiling is neatly formed of willow branches or wattles, and larger pieces of timber, support various parts of the buildings. In one place are the remains of ruined round tower. In the center of the open semi-circle is a hollow which was probably used as a reservoir for water in time of seige. It is estimated there were upwards of 800 rooms in this castle. Embankments are thrown up on the outside and there may have been a moat to defend it. A few yards off is another building made not of stone, but of adobe bricks, possibly a stable. In the setting sun these ruins of an ancient race loomed up picturesquely and were very suggestive.

Evans Warehouse Mystery.

Toronto, Sept. 30 .- The mystery of the Evans warehouse is to remain a mystery. For months the police have been trying to discover how Walley and Geen came to die in the basement of the warehouse under circumstances that pointed to poison. No progress has been made. A few days ago Scott, the foreman in the warehouse, and C. Leitch, one of the basement employes, were arrested on a charge of stealing from the premises. It was thought that a clue to the mystery had been found, but at the police court yesterday both men were discharged. The charge that they had robbed Geen's body after death broke down utterly.
