WALL COLLAPSES BURYING WORKMAN

Man Is Taken To Kitchener Hospital—Condition Critical.

Special to The Advertiser.

Kitchener, May 11.—Found beneath tons of bricks, Alphonse Illig of 22 York street, this city, was taken from under the debris of a fallen wall of the old C.P.R. sheds, which are being wrecked, and which collapsed yesterday. He now lies at the Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital here in a critical condition.

The man suffered severe contusions and lacerations of the scalp, as well as fracture of the collarbone and shoulder. His body is severely bruised.

The man was standing beside the wall which was about to be pulled to the ground by workmen whom he was assisting. Without warning the wall suddenly buckled. He made an effort to escape the falling bricks, but was not quick enough to get clear before he was pinned beneath. At the hospital today he was reported as not improving.

Florence Nightingale

If you have read Lytton Strachey's book on "Eminent Victorians," you will remember his thought-provoking chapter on Florence Nightingale.

The popular picture of "The Lady With the Lamp" is a vision familiar to all. But it is a very incomplete picture, for Florence Nightingale was in reality an administrative chief. "It was not by gentle sweetness and womanly self-abnegation that she had brought order out of chaos in the Scutari hospitals; it was by strict methods, by stern discipline, by rigid attention to details, by ceaseless labor, by the fixed determination of an indomitable will."

After the war, it was her tireless energy which revolutionized the theory of hospital construction and management, and laid the foundations of modern nursing.

The modern hospital, with its orderly efficiency, its scrupulous cleanliness, and its scientific methods, owes much to the life and work of Florence Nightingale.

And we, in turn, owe a heavy debt to our hospitals for the important part they play in community welfare. Are we, as individuals, doing our part to discharge this obligation? Let us remember that our hospitals need our support.
