Hewson Underwear

Unshrinkable
The illustration shows difference between Hewson covered seams and ordinary raw seams.

Why experience underwear discomfort another day when you can get Hewson Underwear, which is the embodiment of ease and comfort? No ordinary rough, raw seams, which are also apt to part under a strain, to irritate you. Hewson seams are neatly and smoothly covered by our new patented machine, installed for this special purpose. So comfortable you wouldn't know there were any seams. And secured so firmly the fabric will rip before the seams will part. For better satisfaction insist on Hewson Underwear next time.

CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

As is well known, this troublesome complaint arises from over-eating, the use of too much rich food, neglected constipation, lack of exercise, bad air, etc.

The food should be thoroughly chewed, and never boiled or swallowed in haste, stimulants must be avoided and exercise taken if possible.

A remedy which has rarely failed to give prompt relief and effect permanent cures, even in the most obstinate cases, is

BITTERS

It acts by regulating and toning the digestive organs, removing costiveness and increasing the appetite and restoring health and vigor to the system.

Dr. J. C. Sawyer, Gold River, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled with dyspepsia, and after trying several doctors to no effect I commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters and I think it is the best medicine there is for this complaint."

SOME STORIES CONCERNING THE BANK OF ENGLAND

Strange Things Have Befallen the Treasure House of Great Britain.

There is no indication that has more romance attaching to it than the Bank of England. It has been nearly ruined on several occasions. It has been beset by thieves—one gang robbed it of over $500,000 thirty years ago—forgery and fraud have been practiced upon it by the most accomplished criminals in history and yet, safe as the Bank of England is, it is a saying which in spite of the institution's many ups and downs is true to the letter.

One morning, just after the bank opened, an angry and excited crowd thronged the street, demanding cash for notes. There was actually double the money in notes in the hands of the mob to what there was in gold and silver in the bank and the outlook was a bad one. Odd had to be met to pay off every claimant, but that took time.

So the directors sent men with notes into the crowd, whose claims they attended to first, and paid each claim in sixpences and shillings. Some men walked away with sacks of shillings over their heads, but the time gained by this method of payment saved the bank, and every claim was paid.

The man who gave the bank the most trouble was one named Charles Price, and he was given the nickname of "Old Patch" because he often wore a black patch over his right eye for no reason save as a disguise. He was one of the finest engravers in the world, beating even the bank engraver. He put forged notes into circulation with surprising skill, and a battle royal began between him and the bank.

Had he not been a master of disguise he would have been caught long before he was, but he managed to "swindle" the bank out of more than $500,000 before he slipped into the hands of the law in a curious manner.

He used to dress in a long black cloak which generally covered the lower part of his face, and although he employed more than a dozen agents had never been seen by one of them out of his disguise.

It was one of these agents who turned upon him. "Realizing that the man was making a fortune, he lay in wait for him and slunk into the corner of a doorway when the muffled figure drew near. Then leaping upon him he tore away his disguise and threatened to send him to the police, unless he acceded to certain preposterous terms. Price refused, so his agent carried out his work and two months later the arch-criminal was convicted and hanged.

Only one man has succeeded in breaking into the bank and this happened about thirty years ago. One day the directors received a letter from an anonymous person saying that he would meet any person the bank would appoint in a room at mid-night on a date fixed but that the person keeping the appointment must not be armed. At first it was thought to be a hoax, but as a precaution detectives searched the building vaults thoroughly and were quite satisfied that under no circumstances could a man enter those rooms; but they waited all through the night, and beyond a peculiar scraping noise which they attributed to rats they heard not saw nothing.

A week later the bank directors were staggered at receiving a box in which lay several securities from the bank vaults and signed with a note saying that if the directors would send a man to the vaults at midnight on the same day the writer would meet him there after having broken in from outside.

Accordingly, three men went down into the vaults. Presently they heard a scraping noise, and a light appeared at one end of the vaults, which vanished, however, on their approach. Then a man's voice coming it seemed, from right under their feet, told them to put on their own jackets and he would appear. They did so with some trepidation, and carrying a dark lantern a man came on the scene. He explained that he was a sewer cleaner and had discovered a disused drain which he found ran right into the bank vaults. He had stolen nothing, so the bank gave him a reward, which was whispered, ran into thousands for his honesty.

The most successful thief the bank had to deal with was Bidwell, an American, who arrived with his gang in 1871. He distributed his agents all over the country, buying up genuine bills that could be manipulated, and then paid into the bank a bona fide of Bathurst's for $22,600, saying that he was going to start making Pullman cars in England. Following this he paid in forged bills to the value of over $500,000 and paid the amount to himself under the name of Warren, at the Continental Bank. This great fraud might have gone on longer than it did had the delinquents not forgotten to put the dates on two of the bills, whereupon they were returned to Messrs. Rothschild for ratification. Then the fraud was discovered and the thieves caught just as they were starting for the continent with their spoil.

When you enter the bank by any door four pairs of eyes watch you, though you are unaware of the fact. Situated close to the doors are hiding places in which are four guardians of the bank. You can't see them, but they can watch you with the aid of reflecting mirrors through which they observe your entrance and exit, and every movement from the time you enter the portals of wealth to the moment you leave them.

VICTORIA'S DINNERS
Dinner Than Those Given by King Edward, but Always Well Served

The present dinner party every evening is a far more entertaining institution than the present King than it was under Victoria, who insisted on all the forms being carried out without reservation or evasion. A dinner under the present King is a great many people an exceedingly dreadful ordeal.

The Queen did not like people who drank more than one or two glasses of wine, says the London correspondent of the Town and Country. She abhorred voluble men and women and was only impressed with people who knew how to keep silent and who spoke only when spoken to; and then when they did speak they were expected to say something interesting.

Dull parties were, therefore, the rule as even the cleverest man feels himself handicapped if he knows he is expected to say something clever or interesting. The Queen herself always had next to her the most important man or woman of the party, and gave them full rein in conversation.

The others, unless they were far away at the end of the table, were to do nothing but devote themselves to the excellent dinner which was always provided for them. In that respect she was an ideal hostess and she knew also what was to be provided for the menu was submitted to her on the morning of each day.

The Queen's dinner at Windsor began at 8. At Balmoral at 8. An hour after sitting down her majesty would retire to an adjoining room for coffee, taking with her one or two selected guests, and the rest were left to carry on their dinner and conversation to suit themselves.

King Edward's arrangements are different. His dinner parties are different from the dinner parties at any other country gentleman. You may talk and you may smoke and you may be silent to suit yourself so long as you are present guests, and the dinner itself in no way lacks the dignity and excellence of those which so many people dreamed in the old days.
