LONDON, April 26.—The great sensation of to-day is the appearance in nearly all the morning papers of a poem by the poet Martin Farquhar Tupper, exhorting the young men of England to enrol themselve s volunteers for the projected expedition to rescue General Gordon at Khartoum. The excitement in England about the dilatoriness of the ministry in sending re-lief to Gordon in Khartoum grows from lief to Gordon in Khartoum grows from day to day. REV. DR. WILD TAKES A PEEP INTO THE FUTURE.

Dr. Wild's text last evening was selected from Ecclesiastes, 3 chap, and 1st verse: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven?" The vastness of the universe and the wonders of the infinity of worlds above and around us, each moving with matchless precision in its own orbit, subject to the law of their creator, was briefly and eloquently dwelt upon. Everywhere is found the clearest proof of the truth of the text. The law of order must be observed. It is now spring time and the farmer must observe times and seasons in his sowing if he would reap in astumn. If you would know the events of the future you must understand the season the world is in. We are in the early autumn and on the even of important chapters, and in his sowing if he would reap in autumn. If you would know the events of the future you must understand the season the world is in. We are in the early autumn and on the eve of important changes, and of the ripening of the world's history. Want of knowledge on this point has upset the calculations of thousands. We may understand the order of events if we will be diligent students.

"The recognition of Israel" was named first in order of the twelve important events forming the subject of the discourse. This was asserted to be in the near future. Providence is conducted on the line of Israel. A number of texts were quoted in support of this view. Each nation has its bounds, and its history and geography are inseparably connected with this people.

"The restoration of the Jews" was to follow. This cannot occur until the finding of the ten lost tribes, for these must act an important part in the drama.

of the ten lost tribes, for these must act an important part in the drama.

"The appearance of anti-Christ" was next to follow, and this must be in the order named. The spirit of anti-Christ is abroad, but this spirit will finally be embodied in one man. Although scores of false Christs have deceived the Jews, one will yet come who will lead them much further astray. The time place and further astray. The time, place and events are all feretold in the bible.

events are all foretold in the bible.

The appearance of the three witnesses prophesied in Revelations was next dwelt upon. These were interpreted as meaning two men, who are to appear in Jerusalem. These men are to be special witnesses for Jesus. They will be prophets in the true sense of the word, and, as they are to come from heaven in their bodies, doubtless they are Moses and Elijah, who escaped death. "The millennium" was the fifth event named. Its approach will be gradual, and from present indications the date might safely be fixed at about A.D. 1935. "The cessation of birth and the prolongation of human life" was next enumerated. "A man will be called a child at one hundred years, and his life shall be as a tree." "The appearance of Christ" will follow in order, and it was asserted that this could not consistently take place unless

"The resurrection and the provision of a fitting body" was named us uinth in order. Quotations were made from St. Paul's writings to emphasize this point. "The translation of the saints remeining and the awful scene was vividly protrayed and the great conflagration depicted in scriptural and impressive language.

The twelfth and final event dwelt upon The twelfth and final event dwelt upon was the final judgment, the great day of assize. The question asked at death will be: Are you a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ? If you are a believer you will be admitted to paradise, and at the final judgment every man will be called to account for the deeds done in the body.

In closing the doctor made an impassioned appeal to all present to accept the salvation provided in Christ, and in thunder tones he asked: How do you hope to appear before the judgment seat of Christ? Young men were especially appealed to to give heed to these great and eternal verities.

The subject for next Sabbath morning will be "The Atonement of Christ," and in the evening "When, How and Where the Jews Will be Restored."

The statement which appeared in The World on Saturday to the effect that Chief Justice Hagarty would take the place of the late Chief Justice Spragge as chief justice of Ontario will be found correct. There is a good deal more judge gossip afloat, and Sir John seems likely to have no small difficulty on hand. Mr. Street's name is again mentioned in connection with a judgeship, as is that also of Mr. Maclennan. The unanimous voice of the profession of course turns to Chistopher Robinson at this juncture, but it is understood that while unwilling to take anything else than a chief justiceship he has a paramount objection to being put over the head of Mr. Hagarty. Possibly either Mr. Strong or Mr. Gwynne would be found quite willing to leave Ottawa for Toronto, but the translation is unlikely to take place of either of these gentlemen. Among the younger members of the bar James F. Smith finds favor as a good appointment to a puisne judgeship. He has many of those qualities which go to adorn the judicial position, as well as a capacity chief justice of Ontario will be found corthe judicial position, as well as a capacity for work, which is not always a prominent characteristic of our judges.

Claxton Orchestra Concert. It is a pleasure to be able to say that the musical numbers of these concerts were in eces, under the able and musicianly finished execution which completely surprised their audiences and gained for them much well-earned applause. The Violet Waltz, Monastory Bells, and Niagara Overture were excellent selections of a light order, containing, however, much light order, containing, however, much difficult execution and intrivate reading. With the exception of one of two scarcely perceptible hitches in the wind instruments, each of these pieces was given in a manner which would have at once placed the orchestra in a very prominent place among organizations of that kind. It was, however, the complete surprise experienced when listening to the Semiramidi overture that at once guaranteed their ultimate success as an organization. The body of tone from the violins was particularly good in this, and the purity of the flute, together with the excellent effect in light and shade which has been produced for the first time from a local orchestra, gained for both the conductor duced for the first time from a local orchestra, gained for both the conductor and the musicians unqualified praise. Herr Jacobsen's violin solo, March Militaire, was but a repetition of his former brilliant interpretations. The citizens of Toronto are not sufficiently acquainted with this excellent young artist and for the reason that we hear him but too seldom, Miss Agnes Corlert's many friends were surprised by her singing at each of the concerts. This young lady invariably pleases, but upon this occasion she proved more conclusively than ever that with proper care and study she has a brilliant tuture before her. Musically the concert were deserving of every praise. It is said that J. F. Thomson is to assume the man agement of the organization. If so it financial success ought to be assured.

of our theatrical season promises to be the engagement of Modjeska at the Grand mances, as follows: Monday, As You Like matinee, Twelfth Night; Wednesday night, matinee, Twelfth Night; Wednesday night, East Lynne. As the engagement opens with Modjeska's celebrated impersonation of Rosalind in As You Like It, following is quoted from the Boston Herald: "To say that the Rosalind of Mme. Modjeska is a most charming embodiment of Shake-speare's poetical creation would impart no news to the many playgoers here who in the past have wandered with her through the Forest of Arden. Her performance is vivacious, graceful, full of arch coquetry and delicate hunfor, refined and finished to a remarkable degree; but skilled and and delicate humor, refined and finished to a remarkable degree; but skilled and experienced actress that she is, her success in this role does not depend alone upon the exercise of her art. There is a personal charm above and beyond all mere technical excellence in her impersonation that gives the character for the time being an absolute reality. "Saucy laquey' she is unmistakably to Orlando, but her 'swashing and martial outside' is assumed for him only; to all across the footlights she reveals, by a thousand subtle indications in voice, expression and gesture, that Rosalind is all a woman, and, furthermore, a woman with 'a passion of earnest.' Her numerous auditors in the Globe theatre last evening yielded themselves willing subjects to the spell she wrought, followed her through every scene with delighted interest, and evinced their pleasure by the most flattering demonstrations."

YACHTING DISASTER

On the south side of the long low building used as a store and reading-room near the Grand Trunk roundhouse, is a boiling spring that is well worth a visit. The water is boiling hot, and the engine men often cook eggs in this ebullient basin and always make their tea and hot drinks from its torrid waters. The strange thing is that it is so near the bay, yet beyond its cooling effect. Some of the engine and train-men have great faith in its medicinal properties, and never pass by without partaking of it as a drink, or bathing their faces in so reviving a lotion. This little geyser, like its big brothers in Iceland, only boils over at times, its most regular hour being about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. hour being about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.
