SINGULAR AND DISTRESSING AFFAIR. We copy the following from the Philadelphia Ledger :-"A highly respectable gentlemen of Baltimore city, who transacted a mercantile business on the wharf, was taken sick and died, as was supposed, a short time since. Being a native of an adjoining city, his wife and friends desired to inter his remains there, and his body was accordingly placed in a coffin and conveyed to that city. When the coffin arrived, it was opened in order to transfer the remains to a more suitable one, which had been prepared, for final interment. When the lid was removed, the body was found lying upon the face which upon examination was bruised. A moisture was observed upon the skin, and on a close examination it was found that the vital spark had not as vet fled. All the restoratives that the best medical May skill could devise, were used, and the man was actually revived and lived for two days afterwards. before the " spirit departed unto him who gave it." No doubt was entertained here of the deceased, and the feelings of relatives and friends at such a June 2,
