Poetry.

What shall I Profit?
If I lay waste and wither up with doubt
The blessed fields of heaven where once my faith
Possessed itself serenely safe from death;
The why? the where? the when? the how?
Or if I orphan my own soul of One That seemed a Father, and make void the place
Within me where He dwelt in power and
glory,
What do I gain, that an myself undone,
—William B. Roscoe in Harper's.

THE CAPTAIN.

The captain, a grave, bronzed man, with iron grey hair, sat at a table before an open book, on which his hand lay.
"Sit down," he said.
"Thank you, sir. It's as easy standing," said Pat with a bow.
"You had better sit down," said the captain. "I may have to talk to you for some time. I have something very particular to say if you are the right man."
"My name is—"
"Pat Nolan," said Pat, beginning to feel uneasy, but then perhaps the captain, knowing he was to be married that evening, wanted to congratulate him, to offer
him a glass of something, or perhaps it was the way of the captain of ocean steamers to be slow and solemn, not thinking how he kept people from their sweet hearts. So Pat sat down, put his hat on the floor, and not knowing just what to do cracked all his knuckles one after the other with a loud rattling noise.
"My name is Patrick Nolan," said the captain again, "and you came on board to find a young woman—a friend of yours."
"Yes, sir," said Pat, "I was to be married to-day," said Pat.
"If God will," said the captain.
"Ay, ay, we can do nothing without that, I well know," said Pat. "The good Lord above and Father Dunn will help me; but I'll do the best I can to fulfil it."
The captain looked down upon the paper
he held before him.
"And the white of many anxious eyes?"
"Make it less than welcome to live,
Or stay the hazard of his wild unrest."
"O, stars! what midnight message do ye bring!
To bring grown weary with the years
The wifely eyes that watch you shining Look! what troubled hearts that know
no peace."

PRODUCE.

THE Connaught Castle had arrived in New York. The cabin passengers had gone ashore. The stowage people were being carried away by their friends or by the boarding house keepers who always wait for them. These were not needed for at about the decks. Wistful eyes turned shoreward, anxious to see a familiar face
and form among all those strange ones
who were to be seen.
