

A Woman's Love-Letters.

And as I gazed, spell-bound, it seemed to move

Its tendril limbs, still swaying tremulously
As if in spirit-doubt ; then glad and free Crystalled the being won from waiting grove

Into a human likeness. There he stood,
The vine-browed shape of Nature's mortal mood.

"Now have I found thee, Vision I have sought

These years, unknowing ; surely thou art fair

And inly wise, and on thy tasselled hair Glow's Heaven's own light. Passion and fame are naught

To thy clear eyes, O Prince of many lands,—

Grant me thy joy," I cried, and stretched my hands.

No answer but the flourish of the breeze Through the black pines. Then, slowly, as the wind
