Dear Sir Arthur,

I have written an extremely foolish play for the final performance in the moose hall on the 20th. Some find it amusing, and I do not think it will give offence, upon that I should seek your opinion. If you will be so good as to set apart half-an-hour, either in your house or in mine, I shall eliminate anything which might not be in good taste. It will be the first meeting of members; as Lord Buccleuch is to take the principal part; and as the Government-General promises to be present, it is
