at once adopted, and reserving, in respect of it, the question of the American emigration, on which I desire some further explanation, it seems to me that the practical course to be followed is this:—

1. That a public appeal be made, in the same manner as has previously been done, or in any other better one that may be devised, for contributions, to be applied by the Society to sending out Clergymen in emigrant ships.

2. That communications be opened with the Bishops and other authorities in the North American and Australian Dioceses, with the Land and Emigration Commissioners, and with the Colonization Society, of the nature above described, with a view to the organization of a permanent system of support to the Colonial Churches on the part of the Society, in proportion to the emigration from this country to the Colonies.
