WELCOME THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

If we allude to Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the Prince of Peace, we merely condense into a phrase his own estimate of himself. He has told us a hundred times of his sunny ways, and only a few weeks ago he dedicated to his fellow countrymen this beautiful peace device, to wit: "Union, peace, friendship, fraternity." If we searched the records of his political career we could easily find scores of such references, so that we think we are not far out in referring to the Premier as the Prince of Peace. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to be credited, he is also the George Washington of Canada. For has he not over and over again told us that he has made of us a nation? On two separate occasions, at least, he made us a nation. According to the laws of the syllogism this would seem to be impossible, but in proof of our assertion we refer to the Premier's own speech, dozens of them, wherein he says he made a nation of Canada, the first time by denouncing the French and German treaties, and, secondly, by respecting Canadian soldiers to South Africa. Now, if he has honestly come by these titles and we think we have shown it, he has the Premier of Canada ought to be greeted with huzzas when he comes to the city to-morrow. Make room for him, fellow-citizens, for the Man who has made of us a nation, the self-appointed Prince of Peace, the father of his country, the George Washington of Canada. Let us hang out banners with the device he has given us. Let us have a love feast where peace, union, friendship and fraternity shall make up the bill of fare.

On the eve of the Prince's entry to our city, it is fitting that we should recall a few of the major peace events of his political career. We all remember the occasion when the Crown's News and the Pacific grafter made their celebrated raid on the people's land and the public purse. Some members of the Cabinet, one in particular, almost broke into open revolt when it was proposed that a Liberal Government should be a party to this gigantic fraud upon the people. The country, too, was worked up to fever heat over the scandal, and civil commotion was imminent when the burglers were seen running off with the plunder in their hands. But fortunately, the Prince of Peace was on the ship. He calmed the troubled waters. "Fellow-countrymen," said he, "we can stand the loss of a few townships of crown lands, we can afford to lose three million dollars, but what will become of this nation if there be no peace? We are all of us here together, and we have to live together—French and English, capitalists and laborers, grafter and grabeer. Let us, then, live in peace." And in the end the advice of the Prince of Peace prevailed. To-day the Crown's News and the Pacific grafter are the most highly respectable, as well as the most honest members of the community. They wear the garb and silk hats, and in the financial world men look up to them as to oracles. The man of sunny ways has converted a set of desperate men into patriotic Canadians. The present of The Globe, for instance, is now one of the happiest men in town. His smile is of the blandest. It has almost a heavenly glow. And all this the Prince of Peace has wrought. Let his device be given in everlasting brass.

Sunny ways are best, says the Prince of Peace. Let us not pursue Mr. Tarte too actively for his extravagance and dissoluteness. It takes all kinds and conditions of men to make up a nation. This is the doctrine of peace: it means every man to the right cheek, thus thrusting the left to him also. Let us thus deal with Mr. Tarte. He is with us and of us. You say he has spent a few millions more of our money than an honest man should spend? Well, what of that? He is a Canadian and we must live peacefully in this country if we wish to make a nation of it. Fellow-citizens, let us have patience with Mr. Tarte. Let us see what he will do next year. And thus it is that the Prince of Peace welds the discordant elements together and makes of Canada a nation.

POLITICAL INTELLIGENCE.

The hopes of a party in power entrenched amid the powers to cajole the electorate, and rosy with the exercise of unlimited patronage, are always high. But the Liberal party has surely climbed to the top notch of hope, as the following Liberal election prophecies amply proclaim. A haughty spirit presides a fall.

When there is a full House of Commons there are 213 members. Of the 92 members from Ontario, 45 were elected as straight Liberals, 40 as straight Conservatives, and 7 as Independents or Patrons. The Liberals expect to carry 50 of these seats this election. There is no bound to Liberal expectations.

Of the 65 members from Quebec, 51 were elected as straight Liberals. The Liberals expect to hold their own.

Nova Scotia sent 20 members to the House, of whom 8 were Conservatives. The Liberals look to have 15 supporters in the next House.

Prince Edward Island sent five representatives, of whom three were Liberals. Sir Wilfrid hopes to count four next session.

New Brunswick sent 14 members to the House. Of these 4 were Liberals, 8 Conservatives and 1 Dr. Lewis, an alleged Independent, but really a Liberal. Hon. John Costigan's break from the Conservatives counted for the Liberals. The Liberals hope for 10 seats in the next count.

Manitoba sent 7 representatives. In the last House 4 were straight Liberals, and 3 were Conservatives. The Liberals expect to carry 5 of these seats this election. There is no bound to Liberal expectations.

The last House gave the Government a majority of 20 over Conservatives and Independents. The Liberals expect to carry 10 of these seats this election. There is no bound to Liberal expectations.

Sir Wilfrid and party, accompanied by Lady Laurier, will arrive in the city on Tuesday at 3.30 p.m. They will stay at the Hotel. The procession will start from the Hotel at 7.30 p.m. Students will head the procession.

With Colonel Laurier—honorary of course, and gained by his would-be-shoulder-shoulder speech—and Major "Jim" Sutherland, one of many a politician, the procession, a sufficiently enormous aspect by the party. Now, it is said, he has been dismissed of the police from the ranks.
