COPPERS

Based on current dividend rates and earnings, the copper stocks are cheap. Most of the large producers will have surplus accounts at the end of 1917, sufficient to pay current dividends for three or four years. There is today no one group of securities in which the protection of the investment is so great in measurable value, or on which the yield is so high as in the securities of the leading copper producers. LAYS ASIDE SUPREMACY FOR RUSSIA, CZARS MESSAGE

Imperial Manifesto Declares Abdication Necessary To Insure Triumph Over Enemies of the Country.

Petrograd, Via London, March 17.—The following is the text of the Imperial manifesto in which the Russian emperor announced his abdication and that of his son:

"We, Nicholas II., by the grace of God, emperor of all the Russias, czar of Poland, and grand duke of Finland, etc., make known to all our faithful subjects in the day of their great struggle against a foreign foe who has been striving for three years to enslave our country. God has wished to send to Russia a new and painful trial. Interior troubles threaten to have a fatal repercussion on the final outcome of the war. The destinies of Russia and the honor of our dear fatherland require that the war be prosecuted at all cost to a victorious end. The enemy is making his last effort and the moment is near when our valiant army in concert with those of our glorious Allies, will definitely chastise the foe."

"In these decisive days of the life of Russia we believe our people should have an honest union and organization of all their forces for the realization of speedy victory. For this reason, in accord with the Duma of the empire, we have considered it expedient to abdicate the throne of Russia and to leave our supreme power. Not wishing to be separated from our loved son, we leave our heritage to our brother, the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovich, blessing his advent to the throne of Russia. We hand over the Government to our brother in full union with the representatives of the nation who are seated in the legislative chambers, taking this step with an inviolable oath in the name of our well beloved country. We call on all faithful sons of the fatherland to fulfill their sacred duty in this painful moment of national trial and to aid our brother and the representatives of the nation in bringing Russia into the path of prosperity and glory. May God aid Russia."

man lines, shrapnels break just above the enemy trenches, and note the heavy high explosive shells bursting in flaming fountains of blackened earth and flying debris. Occasionally a protesting shell will explode among the Germans, but the noise of the British guns is so great that the noise of the intruder is scarcely heard. The British have been firing for some time, and the British shells are seen to burst in the air and smaller brown puffs vainly reaching for the enemy's trenches. The British are hurrying about on their war duties overhead.

There is a continuing mass of shell craters, most of them overlapping or separated by less than a yard of up-turned soil. The fresh fallen German dead have mostly been carried away and buried in secluded hollows, but now and then a German soldier is seen crawling out of a shell crater, straggling and straggling.

One of the problems with which the British are grappling in their drive forward is how to sufficiently hammer their points in artillery and still keep the ground ahead of them into another morass with their shells.

RELIEF SHIPS GO SAFELY WITH FOOD FOR BELGIANS

Difficulty of Getting Supplies From England Increases the Importance of Canada's Contributions.

Montreal, March 17.—Now that a safe passage has been provided for relief ships traveling from this continent to Rotterdam, a greater duty than ever rests upon Canadians to create the supply of food sent over to Belgium, because the supply from Britain is not given the same immunity. That is why food destined for Belgium is piled up in England, and the most serious problem of the food sent direct from this continent is entering Rotterdam for trans-shipment.

Members of the Central Belgian Relief Committee in Montreal now receive the information that the British have it abundantly clear that the lives of many thousands of Belgians are absolutely dependent on such supplies as are voluntarily sent them from Canada and the United States.

The nation available for the distribution of the supplies is $3,000,000 per month short of the amount required to supply the high Belgium with what is regarded as a minimum living ration, even if this extra $3,000,000 were forthcoming. The British government is available for the distribution of the supplies is $3,000,000 per month short of the amount required to supply the high Belgium with what is regarded as a minimum living ration, even if this extra $3,000,000 were forthcoming.

It is interesting to stand behind a battery of British howitzers and see the gun crews in action. The men show the high morale which is in evidence throughout the British front. They whistle and sing and bandy jests as they work. As the firing button is pushed, the gun crew jumps and the mammoth weapon to its original position. It is easy to distinguish the British from the German, and the looker can see a British shell as it travels in a long leap towards its destination.

The forward movement of the British on so wide a front has brought into play the most modern of engineering devices. Roads seem to spring up overnight in most unexpected places. Railways have been judiciously dug through the forward regardless of mud and shell holes, and with a completeness which even in the most primitive of conditions has been the names of French villages which exist now only as geographical reminders. The new revelation of the intensely practical side of modern war is to see a six-inch water main stretching itself into territory not recently occupied by the Germans.

Road-building has been taken into play by the ingenuity of pioneer battalions, and the work of the British is not only a matter of engineering, but of real pioneer work on the prairies and mountains of Canada and the far west of Australia and South Africa. Road material is scarce in the stricken wilderness of No Man's Land, but the refuse of the battle often serves the purpose during the first hours of a new forward move. Broken rifles, bits of clothing, fragments of shells and occasionally a few shells themselves that fail to explode are used in the foundation of new paths. The remains of a recently-evacuated village bring great joy to the pioneers, for that means a temporary supply of food. The remains of a recently-evacuated village bring great joy to the pioneers, for that means a temporary supply of food.

On High Ground.
In the meantime the British troops are reveling in the joy of occupying high ground. They are now on the crest of the hills, and the British are reveling in the joy of occupying high ground.
