Hon. J. R. Bowie, attorney-general for Alberta, accompanied by his young son and daughter, Master Fred and Miss Helen, are spending the week in town, guests in the home of Mr. Bowie's brother-in-law, R. W. Martin, premier of Saskatchewan, who was on his way home from the national Liberal convention in Ottawa, and Alex Martin, manager of the Dominion Tire Company, Kitchener. Hon. W. M. JUDD-HYSLOP. A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Judd of London, when their youngest daughter, Esther Lindsay, was united in marriage to Mr. William J. Judd of London. The bride, dressed in white silk crepe de chine trimmed with pearls, wearing veil and orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of Ophelia roses, entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. Harry Haynes of Kintore.

The bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Hosack, of Thamesford, was gown in white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of red roses. Little Miss Gladys Hosack, in white silk and carrying a basket of snapdragons, made a pretty little flower girl, while Mr. Gordon Judd, a brother of the groom, acted as groomsmen.

The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreen and white roses in the presence of only immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom by Rev. William Scott (Salisbury) of Thamesford. After the ceremony the young couple were entertained at luncheon at the tables being decorated with sweet peas and ferns. Following the luncheon a toast was proposed to Mr. and Mrs. Judd. Amid showers of confetti they left for their new home, 650 Piccadilly street, this city, the bride travelling in a motor car and wearing a hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Judd will be at home to their friends after September 15, 1919.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid a bar mounted with pearls, to the flower girl a signet ring, to the bridesmaid a pearl pin, to the violinist a pair of cuff links.

Good Night Stories

The Little Carpenter Whose Tools

Never Grew Rusty.

One day as Billy was on his way to school he sat down upon a log to rest.

He looked at the log with great head-like eyes that watched Dicky carefully, then darted back out of sight.

"Who do you suppose he was?" asked Dicky to no particular purpose.

"Looked like a lazy little ant," said Billy.

"That's just what he is," laughed a squeaky voice, and Squeedee came jumping up from behind the log.

"He's a very busy little fellow," said Billy.

"An ant?" laughed Dicky. "What kind of an ant is that?"

"He's a Carpenter Ant," replied Squeedee, blowing softly on his magic whistle. The little black head with the shiny head eyes popped up again, and when he saw who was calling he hurried down the log toward Squeedee and Dicky.

"Well, Billy, how are you?" asked Squeedee, sliding one of Billy's six legs.

"How's the carpentry work going?" Dicky isn't going to harm you or steal your tools," he laughed by way of introduction.

"Glad to hear it," laughed Billy Carpenter Ant in a tiny voice. "Oh, the work's coming fine. Want to see it?"

"Of course, that was just what Squeedee wanted," said Billy. "He didn't like the work, but he wanted to see it."

Billy Ant led his new home, which was built inside the old dead log.

"The dwelling was laid out in a series of floors with small rooms and large rooms and galleries and staircases and other things by arches, pillars and partitions. There were no stairs, for Billy Ant and his family can run up and down walls as well as they can floors. At first Dicky thought it very funny to be walking on the walls of the wall, but by the time they had covered the whole house Dicky was just as much at home on walls as he was on the floor.

"The doors were either arched or oval, as were the windows which served for ventilation. Everything was just as neat as a pin, and the walls were nice and smooth.

"Oh, this is lovely!" exclaimed Dicky. "How in the world did you do it?"

"Where are your tools anyway?"

"Right here," laughed Billy Carpenter Ant, pointing to his strong jaws, where two pinners that looked like a pair of pliers were fastened to the strong muscles of the face. The inner edges were armed with sharp teeth-like saws I can dig, saw, carve, bore, pinch, carry and dig, and give it a good shove, waving the terrible looking things in the air.

"Some tools!"

"And the beauty of it is that Mr. Billy Ant's tools never grew rusty or dull. But I give you better to be going or you'll be late for school," and taking Dicky, "But I don't believe I'd care to go to school."

"It certainly would be nice to have tools that wouldn't rust," said Dicky. "But I don't believe I'd care to be a carpenter ant."

Then bidding his comrade good-bye he hurried on to school.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

Now For the Fun!

Dear Miss Grey,—Could you publish a few hints regarding tea-cup lore?—What the different things in the cups mean,—hearts, dots, etc., made by the tea-leaves? We're just a bunch of spinsters and want to have a bit of fun reading each other's fortunes. So tell us what you know, won't you, Cynthia, dear?

THE ELEGANT EIGHT.

Ans.—What I don't know personally about tea-cup lore would fill a library for several books at least, but this clipping, long stored away, may help you read your fortunes, especially if you all have good imagination:—

Straight lines denote peace, tranquility and long life.

Long wavy lines denote vexations and losses.

Square figures foretell happiness and security.

Oblong figures, family discord.

Curved or twisted figures are sure signs of annoyance.

Circles predict money.

A crown signifies honor.

A triangle denotes an unexpected journey.

The anchor, success in business if at the bottom of the cup, or success in love if at the top.

The cross predicts adversity.

The heart signifies pleasure if two are together, or one with a ring near it, marriage.

Dots, like dust, mean money.

The ring predicts marriage.

The sun is the sign of the greatest good luck.

The moon (or crescent) denotes high hopes, and if at the bottom of the cup, good fortune by land and water.

The rod shows differences with relatives about legacies.

Flowers are signs of peaceful and joyous life.

Other animals, troubles and difficulties.

Human figures are good signs. Denote marriage.

The letter denotes news; if surrounded by dots, contains money.

Attempts to remove but one of the following methods might be successfully tried: (a) Rub with clean hand, then soap well and leave for an hour; then pour warm, not hot water, through the strainer, and let it soak for half an hour.

(b) Moisten the spot with chloroform, then cover with a piece of blotting paper, and press with a hot iron. (c) Rub first with warm soapy water, rinse and press.

Dear Miss Grey,—Your Mail-Box of last Friday contained the letter of a big soldier who had made a big drop of good Canadian blood in my body just to think that there are any other city that would dare say those men are "roughnecks," and advise an ex-soldier not wear his service badge. Why, that is the first thing I look up for when passing a lad now, is the little button that marks him as "one who loved his fellowmen."

But, really, I I were the judge, the opinion of such a one as I am, is the least. They are not capable of an opinion at all who would in any way slight the ones to whom we owe so much. For my part, and I am not a city girl, I would sooner have the honor of knowing the boy who went overseas than any other man on earth.

I think we should echo that prayer and give it a different meaning. "Lord God of hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget the very worst to the last, and even the very worst to the last, we know have made such a clean sacrifice that it should forever wipe out all the mistakes of his life. Now, say, Miss Grey, you thought you would be besieged with requests for London Soldier's address."

Now, didn't you, so you just headed us off by saying you did not have it? You see, he has been a war bit in the business myself, and know, but I do hope poor lonely will get a grain of comfort from the letter, and here is one who believes that that beautiful little poem was not alone meant for the dead lad, but for him who has returned to us. I always think of it when I think of the lads who have fought and won for us such glorious freedom.

And now as I see someone else has
