John A. Drake Back As Owner On Turf

Famous Plunger of Halcyon Era Gets Back in the Game—Was Gates' Partner

Toronto, Mar. 9.—For the first time in more than a decade the famous colors of John A. Drake, the light blue and gold, will be seen on the local tracks this season. The western sportsman, who in the halcyon days of the turf, before the repeal of the Percy Gray law in 1908, owned and reared some of the greatest thoroughbreds in America, has re-entered the sport with two imported two-year-olds as starters.

The Drake horses are Midas II, by McDonald II, out of May-Louise III, and an unnamed colt by Light Brigade and Panne. Phil Chinn, the Kentucky horseman, bought them for him in England last year, and Mr. Drake thinks so much of them that he has entered them in many juvenile stakes.

For the last three or four years Mr. Drake has been a daily visitor at the metropolitan tracks. He made many wagers, but they never were large enough to cause any excitement, such as in the old days when he kept the patrons of the sport on the qui vive, waiting his wagers on a race. Mr. Drake loves a thoroughbred and has always been a devotee of the game. It was common gossip on the tracks last year that he was a part owner of the Kentucky Stable, the nonentities of which always have been made by Mr. Chinn.

A Plunger of Old.

In the old days of the turf Mr. Drake was probably the most conspicuous racegoer in America. With the late W. Gates, he won and lost fortunes on the success or defeat of a single horse. While a score of it was reported that their winnings on a single event extended into six figures, but invariably both of the sportsmen of their winnings had been grossly exaggerated.

Some of the thoroughbreds which carried the Drake silks will live forever in turf history. For they earned undying fame by defeating the best horses in the country in some of the richest and most historic classics.

In 1902 he won the two most coveted trophies on the American turf. His West race home in front of a big field in the American Derby in Chicago and his two-year-old Stables won the Futurity at Sheepshead Bay by a head after one of the greatest races run for the famous classic. Each of these fixtures was worth many thousands of dollars, and it was reported at the time that the Drake-Gates combination had wagered heavily on each of their winners.

In one day at Chicago his colors dashed home in front of four horses. Jockey Garner carried them to victory on Runnel, Hebe, Wes and Ireland.
