Editor's Talk

EVERY reader of a journal must naturally be interested in its progress and development. This periodical, we hope, is not exceptional in this particular. We have tried to command the confidence and to gain the active good-will of those who believe in the possibility and desirability of a national weekly. We believe that in a large measure we have succeeded. The growing subscription list proves that the people generally are responding to our efforts; the success which has come to the advertisers who use our columns proves that our subscribers are loyally supporting us in this respect.

AS our revenues expand, we are putting the increase into improvements of various kinds. We are determined to make the Courier of 1909 surpass in every way the Courier of 1908. Better reading matter, better illustrations, more artistic display and a larger paper are on the present programme. We invite further co-operation, assistance and criticism.

To Newsdealers

The Canadian Courier desires and needs the co-operation of newsdealers throughout Canada in the work of building up a National Weekly.

What is good for the Courier is good for the newsdealers. More readers of the one means more customers for the other.

A Canadian proposition should be the most interesting to your customers. Have you studied out what the Canadian Courier means?

We have a special proposition—something to say direct to the newsdealers who will write us this week. We want you to say what you are doing. We can then say what we can do. We can show you; We can help you. Write to
