

EPILOGUE.

358.—The authorship of this epilogue is doubtful. Grant White calls it "a manifest and poor imitation of the epilogue to As You Like It."

359 Lines 33, 31: for OLDCASTLE died a marty^r, and this is not the man.—This appears to have been written before the name of Oldcastle was changed to Falstaff, though after the use of the name had been criticized. These criticisms subsequently led to dropping the name, which here is declared to have no reference to the martyr.

360 Lines 35–37: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.—In the Q these words occur at the end of the first paragraph (after promise you infl- nately). Grant White believes that the epilogue originally ended there, and that the transposition was overlooked when the other two paragraphs were added.

In Shakespeare's time a prayer for the sovereign was offered by the players at the close of a theatrical performance; and Steevens quotes the forms of prayer given at the end of the epilogue in several old plays. Compare, for instance, Preston's Cambyses (before 1570):

As duty binds us, for our noble queene let us pray,
And for her honourable councel, the truth that they may use,
To practise Justice, and defend her grace eche day;
To makeinge God's word they may not refuse,
To correct all those that would her grace and gracie's laws abuse:
Be seekinge God over us she may reigne long,
To be guided by truthe and defouled from wrong.
Amen, q. Thomas Preston.
