"GETTING BY" WITH IT.

Lord Dufferin delivered an address before the Green class of the McGill University about which a reporter wrote:

"His lordship spoke to the class in the purest ancient Greek, without mispronouncing a word or making the slightest grammatical solecism."

"Good heavens!" remarked Sir Hector Langevin to the late Sir John A. MacDonald, "how did the reporter know that?"

"I told him," was the Conservative statesman's answer.

"But, you don't know Greek."

"True; but I know a little about politics."—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Questions and Answers. Miscellaneous.

Halter With Horse.

If a man sells a horse, is he supposed to deliver the halter with the horse, nothing being said about the halter at the time of the bargain?

INQUIRER.

Ans.—Yes. It is the general custom to give a good halter with a horse when selling him.

A Bad Weed.

Can you tell me, through the columns of "The Farmer's Advocate," what the enclosed plant is, and whether it is a noxious weed or hard to get rid of? It was growing among the hay.

T. W. J.

Ans.—The plant sent is bladder campion. When it becomes established it crowds out cultivated crops, and it is difficult to suppress by cultivation. It produces many seeds. Cut clover early in which this weed appears. Then plow and fallow thoroughly for the balance of the season. Deep, thorough cultivation, will suppress it.

Killing Burdocks.

Will you kindly tell us, through the columns of "The Farmer's Advocate," the best method of destroying burdocks?

J. M. W.

Ans.—The burdock seldom gives trouble in fields under clean cultivation. One of the best times to kill it is the first year, when the big leaves are seen spreading over the ground around the root. Spud it out then, being sure to cut it down below the crown. A sharp spade, or spud, answers the purpose. Or, a good method is to cut the plants the second year before they ripen seed and burn them. A handful of salt applied to the roots after plants have been cut in hot, dry weather, will kill them.

Colt Weakening.

What is wrong with a three-weeks-old colt? Its front legs are very thick and crooked. It was not like that when it was foaled. It seems very weak. Can you give us directions how to cure it? Hope to see it in next week's issue.

H. W.

Ans.—From the meagre symptoms given, we are unable to diagnose the case. If the colt's joints are swollen, it likely has navel or joint ill, and if so, may be dead before you read this answer. Very often young colts' legs are weak and crooked, but they are usually worse immediately after being foaled, and gradually improve as the colt gains strength and vigor. They should, however, not be swollen. If the colt is still alive and suffering from the trouble, you had better call in your veterinarian.

Chickens Sneeze—Pruning Trees.

1. A flock of eight-weeks-old chickens continually sneeze; have been doing so for two weeks. No sign of gapes or any other disease, and apparently well every way. Can you give me cause and cure?

2. Is the month of June a good time to trim the branches from maple and elm trees?

W. B. W.

Ans.—1. This is likely due to a cold if no gapeworms are present. Keep the chicks out of wet grass, and avoid drafts in their roosting-place. This has likely been brought on by a draft or by the chickens being exposed to dampness. Feed liberally.

2. We would favor pruning in early spring. If pruned before growth begins in March or April, it may be necessary, if many large limbs are cut, to paint them over to avoid loss of too much sap. If you have the time, it should do no damage to prune now, but time is precious on most farms at this season.

A girl baby was brought to a Seattle clergyman to be baptized. He asked the name of the baby.

"Dinah M.," the father responded.

"But what does the M. stand for?" asked the minister.

"Well, I don't know yet. It depends upon how she turns out."

"Why, I do not understand you," said the minister.

"Oh, if she turns out nice and sweet about the house, like her mother, I shall call her Dina May. But if she has a fiery temper and bombshell disposition like mine, I shall call her Dina Might."
