FIVE - MINUTE'S SERMON.

Seventh Sunday After Pentecost. BAD ASSOCIATIONS.

"Beware of false prophets, who come to you in the clothing of sheep, but inwardly they are ravening wolves."-Matt. 7, 15.

The false prophets, of whom our Sav iour warns us to day, are the seduc ers, scandalizers, who approach us in the clothing of sheep, of hypocritical dissimulation, who obtrude themselves as well meaning friends, but in reality, have in view only the destruction of our soul. To associate with such our soul. To associate with such persons, is clearly to dedicate one's soul to perdition. Truly, it was not necessary for our Saviour to warn us, for reason and the experience of life convince us, that whatever our company is, such also are we. Or is it possible to associate every day with an outcast, without becoming gradually accustomed to his faults, to love them by degrees, to adopt them finally and to become a reprobate oneself ? This is so natural with our innate propensity to imitate and our inherited inclin ation to evil, that it is scarcely neces sary for the devil to lend a helping hand Put a few grains of salt into a glass of sweetened water, and what will happen ? Will the salty fluid become water become salty? Among a hun-dred sound apples, place only one that is decayed; will the latter again be-come fresh, or will it bring corruption to all the good ones? Place one t, or rather, will not the sweet to all the good ones? Place one diseased sheep among a flock of healthy ones, will the sick sheep become well, or will the whole flock become infected? See how nature teaches us by the most airy rooms on either side. This property consisted of about five acres, two of which-nearest the impressive examples, what will certainbe our portion in the spiritual life, house-were laid out in flower and despising the admonition of our Redeemer, we associate with false prophets in sheep's clothing. We will fare, as says the wise man: 'He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled with it and he that hath fellowship with the proud, shall put on pride." Eccli. 13, 1. In the saddest manner, we shall experience the warning sentence of the "With the perverse royal psalmist : thou wilt be perverted." Ps. 17, 27. Justly, therefore, does St. Paul say: ow you not that a little leaven con rupeth the whole lump ?" 1 Cor. 5, 6 Oh ! what profound truth is in this say Oh, what mischief and destruc ing ! tion may not be caused by one villain! One Lucifer sufficed to transform millions of good and holy angels into devils. One impious domestic is capable of ruining a whole family, one immoral child is able to infect a whole school and to poison the hearts of all the children. So great is the power of bad example, so deplorable our innate weakness and inclination to evil.

But if this is the case, what must those expect who blindly confide themand sleet. Another subject of constant wonderment among visitors was that selves to all persons without knowing not tumble, head-foremost, down the them, to whom it is immaterial with whom they associate and have inter-course, be they good Christians or steep, grassy incline which sloped from the plateau to the street. But scandal givers and seducers? Will they persevere on the good road and remain faithful to God, or will not the they never did; and if they had, no them so well from other evils, would also have preserved them from hurt. devil triumph over them and secure with the chains of hell? And The principal charm of this delightful what then will be the fate of those poor residence was that, being cut off, as it were, from the world below, they knew little of it and cared less -finding all children, whose parents, forgetting their office of guardian angels, are the pleasure and amusement they could desire in the large, beautiful garden and fringe of shady woods that careless and unconcerned where e the children run about. what kind of companions they have, what they see and hear? Would it not be a miracle if bounded it. such poor children, through the fault of their parents, were not led in earliest years to the way of hell by vice and seduction ? And those poor apprentices, companions and servants, of whom there are many, what will be come of them if unscrupulous masters often the case, they have fulfilled their whole duty by giv ing them board and wages, without, however, troubling themselves about their morals, their behavior and asso ciates, permitting them loose acquaint. ances, nightly rambles, intercourse with evil companions? Do such masters and mistresses still claim to have a conscience? Do they still be lieve in the fearful words of the apostle If any man have not care of those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel ?" I. Tim. Ah, yes, how many sins might 5, 8. Ah, yes, now many souls saved be prevented, how many souls saved from perdition, if Christian masters, in regard to their subjects, were to take the place of God instead of that of Satan ! But for this reason our Lord has said in His gospel : "Many are called, but few are chosen." Matt. 22, With their own souls will thos have to answer, whom Heaven has intrusted with the souls of others, if by their terrible indifference they allow them to be lost. O parents and superiors, do, there fore, all in your power to preserve your children and your subjects from destruction of evil association. Reason for the unreasonable and inexperienced; be conscientious as such who must one day render a severe account. But I beseech you, in the sacred words of Jesus: "Beware of false prophets," the seducers, flee from them as from pestilence and cholera, shun them as poisonous serpents. To perish bod ily is certainly sad, but it is far more terrible to lose one's soul and to burn eternally in hell. Be warned, there fore, and despise not the voice of grace, which says to you : "My son, sinners shall entice thee, consent not to them. If they shall say, Come with us, my son, walk not thou with them. Prov. I, 10, 11 and 15. Amen.

"Well," replied their mother, smiling at the enthusiasm of the children, "I think I shall. Get your best white sunbonnets; and take each other's hand, so that you will be more safe, and not likely to be separated as you go along the avenue. You are such little things that you might get lost in

THE LITTLE MESSENGERS.

A Story of St. Anthony of Padua.

BY SYLVIA HUNTING, IN AVE MARIA

I.

Patty and Annie were two little girls of five and seven, who lived in the suburbs of a large city, -so near that they could hear its busy hum from the crowd.". The children ran off, and soon re turned with their pretty white sun-boanets on top of their soft brown curls; and the mother looked after them wistfully as they went down the steps together, hand in hand-Annie with the other hand in her apron pocket, tightly holding the nickel which was to pay for the thread. She had begged to carry it, and Patty had been willing; partly, I suspect be-cause it left the hand free on which shone the bright new golden circlet with its rich, dark stones. And I do not think one would be far wrong who should think that she held that little hand somewhat conspicuously in the public eye, as she rotted along with her sister to do her mother's errand.

I say so far, because the house in which they lived was the little ones did not appear. More built on what the extension of the city than once the mother went to the front of the house, from which, through a had left of a high hill, once covered with beautiful forest-trees, which had bend in the Avenue, she could see a long distance ; but there were no little in earlier days been a favorite resort of city folks when they wished to take white sunbonnets in view. But the making of a broad avenue, and the cutting necessary to accom-plish this, had left that part of the property facing the street many feet above the sidewalk. A stone wall had been built, over which ivy grew in policeman just getting ready to fetch them home. As near-ly as I can remember—and I have not ascent, found it easy enough ; but not so strangers, who invariably com-plained of the steps; wondering, too, how they ever managed it in winter forgotten it even after all these years, -this is how they related it : when the ground was frozen and slip-

"Mamma," began Patty, seated on pery, especially after a fall of snow her mother's knee, close to her breast, as befitted the bereaved one ; while Annie sat on the step of the porch, just at her feet,—" mamma, it was this way. When we got to the foot of the steps, a girl was sitting there. She the children, who were all small, did was ragged, but she was big-I think maybe ten,—and I knew my clothes would not fit her. She had a basket, and it was dirty, and there was a dirty doubt the Providence, which guarded

"He said he would keep a sharp lookout for the girl, ma'am," said Maggie; "for she was nothing but a common thief, and ought to be put in the House of Refuge. But he said she was a sharp one, and wouldn't come around that corner for a spell. He didn't remember ever to have seen one that looked like the children described her. Poor little lambs ! they'll never forget this fright." When papa came home the cad story was again related, to his great sym-pathy and indignation. He saw the friendly policeman, who premised to report to him if the thief was found and the promise of a new ring-which Patty stipulated, should be "exactly like the other"-did much to alleviate the sorrow of the bereaved child. But the effects of the nervous terror and shock remained, and it was a long time before those two little ones again dared to venture forth upon the streets alone. Their first experience had been to bitter to be soon forgotten.

II. More than a week had passed since the adventure of Patty and Annie, and no word had been received of the stolen ring. The friendly policeman had reported to the father of the children that, although he had been on the lookout for the girl, he had not seen any one answering her description. His theory was that she be-longed down town, and had strayed out of her usual begging route that day, as those of her class-professional beggars-sometimes do. Having possessed herself of the ring, it was not likely that she would soon again make her appearance in the vicinity, where she might be recognized and arrested. This theory seemed prob-

Patty's godfather, a pious priest, lived in a neighboring parish, and occasionally visited the family. He was very fond of the little girl, and she returned his affection. After papa and mamma, she thought there was no one like her godfather. On the occasion of his next visit Patty related the story of her loss, her lips quivering, tears in her innocent eyes When she had finished he said : CONCLUDED IN NEXT ISSUE.

CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN.

Mr. Daredevil and Mr. Darenot. There are two types of young men whose peculiarities and short-comings wish to consider to day. The first I call Mr. Daredevil, because he is not afraid to attempt anything, no matter how foolhardy. His discretion does not keep pace with his coarage, and he is constantly getting into scrapes through his want of reflection. Now courage is a very desirable quality in this world, but it may be used to one's own disadvantage, and that of one's neighbor. It needs to be tempered with that saving common sense to which Tennyson attributed in part the success of the Duke of Wellington, as a man and a soldier. To be sure, a hero may lead a forlorn hope, through motives of patriotism. as Warren did at Bunker Hill, but usually there is no need of rashly rush-ing into danger. The foolhardy man s rarely a success, for he pursues the wildest schemes on the spur of the moment. True, he sometimes triumphs, but his failures outnumber his victor ies in the long run. He is the one who is always ready to enter into the craziest speculations, like young Mr. Leiter, whose gigantic manipulations of wheat drove many poor people to the verge of starvation. such an exhibition of nerve as he dis played is well nigh criminal. There could be but one end to such a career -disaster. He was a plunger, and he plunged once too often, as men of his kind inevitably do. And Mr. Daredevil rarely belies his name. He takes a devilish joy in getting men into difficulties either by fair means or foul-usually the latter. He may not start out to be a scoundrel, but that is the character he establishes for himself in the end. His schemes lead him into positions from which he thinks he can not extricate himself without breaking the law. Hence we have so many embezzlements by bank officials who have taken desperate chances in the stock market. Mr. Daredevil is not to be imitated. Neither is Mr. Darenot. The latter has no confidence in himself at all, and without self confidence no one can hope to succeed. If a young tellow is always doubting his ability to do a thing he will never make a worthy attempt, and will be an obstruction in the community in which he lives, dead log who might as well be out of existence as in it, for all the good he accomplishes. There is a great difference between over confidence and manly estimate of one's own powers The young man who has too poor an opinion of himself is apt to degenerate into a loafer, and from a loafer into something worse-a thing that is despised by the world, which has no use for a man who has not a decent selfrespect. Now, miud you, I am not decrying true humility, which makes a man recognize his littleness before man recognize his God, but simply that jelly fish inertia and cowardice which causes a young fellow, whose blood is naturally sluggish, to refuse to make an effort. Courage may be acquired by even those who are born timid. Many a those who are born timid. young soldier has gone into his first mother succeeded in learning that the fight trembling with fear, who after-girl had actually dragged them into ward turned out a hero. A becoming the hallway ; and, after snatching the trust in God will make a man ring from Patty's finger and the nickel brave under the most adverse circumstances. Without this re liance on a Higher Power he is apt to drift into that state of mind which ends in suicide-and suicide, to vary a saying of Daniel Webster, is to acknowledge defeat. Mr. Darenot folds his hands and drifts, and he is, consequently, always running against snags. He is a burden to himself and everyone else who is associated with him, and he not infrequently adds drinking to the other evils which result from the failure to acquire self confidence in the battle of life. What would be thought of the soldier who would sit down on a battlefield, hoping by this means to avoid direct shots and stray bullets? He would probably be drummed out of the regiment without delay. And the fellow who would act rashly in opposition to military orders, thus needlessly imper-iling the lives of his fellows, would, no doubt, meet with a similar fate. So when you are seeking for models of right conduct do not select either Mr. Daredevil or Mr. Darenot. Mr. Golden Mean is the one you must chose as an example. This type does not slop over or fall short through cowardice. -Benedict Bell, in Sacred Heart Review.

How Mrs. Wm. Henry Makes Money

I have been so successful in the past few months that I feel it my duty to aid few months that I feel it my duty to aid others by giving them my experience. I have not made less than $18 any day for the last five months, and have not can-vassed any. I put a notice in the papers that I am selling the Iron City Digh Washer and mends cand feather that Washer, and people send for them by the dozen. They give such good satisfaction that every family wants one. Dishes washed and dried in two minutes. I think any person can easily clear $10 a day, and double that after they get start-ed good. I don't see why any one should ed good. I don't see why any one should be destitute, when they may just as wel be making lots of money if they try. Ad dress the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 143 S. As I said before, Patty and Annie

The day on which my story opens was Patty's birthday. She was just seven, and her father had given her an exquisite little ring set with gar-nets, which had delighted her more than any present she had ever re-ceived. For Patty had a pretty, symmetrical little hand, and the ring looked well upon it. And that Patty was aware of this became evident at once; so much so that her perhaps over-scrupulous father had some mis givings as to whether he had not laid the foundation stone of vanity in her mind and heart by this welcome and beautiful gift. But Patty's mother did not share in these fears. She knew it was but natural that the child should be a little taken out of herself by the lovely ring ; and knew also that, after the first fever of admiration and the first joy of possession should subside, the ring would become as much a mater of course as her other belongingsquite an everyday affair, the same as the pretty frocks and aprons the children loved to put on when they were fresh and new

This morning their mother sat on the porch, sewing. The children had said their lessons, and were playing on the lawn near her. Presently they heard her call, "Patty ! Annie ! and ran to her side. "Children," she said, "I wonder whether you could not go to the store for me and get a spool of thread? Maggie is busy helping Sallie with the ironing, and I need the thread very much. I think I might let you go, if you are not afraid ?"

"Afraid !" they both exclaimed with one breath. "Why should we be afraid ?"

"O mamma, do let us go!" said Patty, dancing up and down in the exuberance of hope and joy at the con-templated privilege. "It is only two blocks away, and we've been there hundreds of times with Maggie. Do le: us go !"

"Then I did," continued Patty ; "but she said : 'Where you uns goin'?"—that's what she said. And then we told her we were going to the store for some thread, and she said 'I guess I'll go along,' cause you're so little I kin take care of you.'" "I thought that was real kind of

"But I said no, mamma," put in Annie. "I said : 'You needn't come with us. We know the way ourselves, and we are in a hurry. Come Patty

"Then she picked up her dirty bas ket," said Patty, "and came fast as she could. When we got a little ways up the Avenue she said : 'How much money have you got?' I said : 'A nickel.' 'Let me carry it. Some one may take it from you,' she said."

Annie : my apron pocket, and I'm holding it with my hand.' But she begged and begged, but I wouldn't even let her touch it."

"Then," added Patty, "she began to say: 'What a pooty ring ! Ain't that a new ring ?' And I told her papa gave it to me for my birthday as thin as yours, and thinner. Let's see if it ain't.' But I wouldn't, and then she didn't ask me any more. So she just walked on, kind of a little behind us, till we came to the hallway that goes into Lincoln Flats, and she opened her eyes so big and said: 'Come in here a minute. I want to leave my basket.' But we wouldn't go
