BONE DRY

In Kansas they have passed a law—the tightest thing you ever saw—which makes you felon if you try to keep on hand a flask of rye. The felonist trembles in his shoes; if he is found providing booze, he takes a journey to the pen, and never will get out again. The man who's found transporting gin is by the halibut gathered in; the cad strips him of his kale, and gives him fifty years in jail. An empty bottle in your hall, a corkscrew hanging on the wall, is proof that you've defied the law—for you a cell, with mouldy straw. The man whose breath suggests a drink—four fingers, say, of old red ink—is lucked down with horse and hound, and hunked up in the village pound. And if your nose is red, dry man, you'd better bleach it while you can; in Kansas noses must be pale, if people would stay out of jail. Oh, where are our God-

SIDE TALKS

A VERY AMUSING STORY.

In answer to the little article which I wrote about the woman who criticized a protegee and beneficiary of hers because she went to the movies occasionally, a letter friend has sent me such a delightful little story that I am giving my space to her today.

"I have just been reading 'She Went to the Movies,'" she writes, "and it reminded me of a story I heard but yesterday. I'll tell it to you and use fictitious names.

The Kind of a Woman She Was "Mrs. S. was an early settler here. She came to America from England, leaving a 'dead beat' husband. Here she opened a little library and reading room. Her father had been a second hand bookseller in London and she grew up in the atmosphere of books and made the acquaintance of authors over the counter. She had also been to India where she had made a governess' acquaintance with Lord and Lady This and That. When she came here she found many English. She assumed the air of a great lady, although as O'Henry would say 'Decayed Gentility in Reduced Circumstances.' These circumstances grew more and more reduced, until as age drew on she became a genteel pauper, supported by the alms of wealthy old-timers.

They Wanted Her to Have Some Real Comforts "Now to my story, suggested by yours. The Misses B. two ancient

Mrs. Anna Yost has entered action against the Aneco Company, of New York, asking $50,000 damages, alleging that her photo was used for trade purposes without her consent. A picture was taken of Mrs. Yost in bathing costume in the act of aquaplaning, and this picture was printed by a New York newspaper with her consent. The company say they may have used Mrs. Yost's figure, but the head was that of another woman.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The March meeting of the Oak Hill Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. Williams, Burford Road. The meeting was opened in the usual way. Mrs. H. Jennings, the President, in the chair. After the business was concluded, very interesting papers were given by Mrs. P. Fairlie on Bread Making, and Miss Margaret McDonald on Victims of the War. A splendid talk on Institute work by Mrs. W. Welsh was much enjoyed as was a recitation by Master Frederic Williams. Another interesting feature of the afternoon was the selling of the recipe of a wartime cake, the proceeds to be used for Red Cross work. The hostess served dainty refreshments. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. P. Lawrence, April 4th.

At the regular meeting of the Terrace Hill and Grand View Women's Institute, the members were highly favored by a visit from the Echo Place Institute, who came prepared to give a splendid programme, consisting of several excellent papers, readings, and music, vocal and instrumental. Every number was heartily enjoyed by the members. It was shown in the applause following a vote of thanks moved by Mrs. G. I. Wood and seconded by Mrs. Eastcott. At the close of the programme, the roll call of both Institutes was answered by many varied and useful help hints. A social half hour over the tea cups enabled all to become better acquainted. Many thanks are due Messrs. Smith and Gorman who looked after the comfort of the visitors in conveying them to and from the Radial car at St. Paul's Ave.

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

THE DREAM BOAT

Mother tucked Dotty into bed, kissed her good-night and turned the light low. "Pleasant dreams," she said, as she closed the door. Dotty lay gazing at the light as it flickered, sending shadows over the wall.

"Why, no, they are not shadows at all—how stupid of me! It's a boat," Dotty whispered to herself. And before long the room was filled with dainty little ships that danced on waves of light. Dotty lay up in bed so she might see them better. At the wheel of each sat a wee little fellow.

"These must be moonbeam boats," she whispered, so she would not frighten them away. But one little Imp heard her and steered his ship toward the bed, letting it settle on the coverlid in front of Dotty. "Good morning, Dotty," he said. "Why, it isn't morning, it's night-time and I'm in bed," laughed Dotty. "You don't understand me; your night is our day. When your mother puts you to bed, we're just waking in Dreamland," explained the Imp.

"Oh, I see," said Dotty. "The Imp handed her a buttercup. "Drink this," he said, and Dotty did as she was told, and there she stood at the side of the dream-boat, just as small as the little Imp. "Swing to the southward," he commanded, and the little ship sailed up the moonbeam that streamed in the window, away to a beautiful river.

On either bank Dotty saw the wonderful castles of Fairyland that mother had told her about. "That is where the King of the Flower Fairies dwells," said the little Elf, pointing to a beautiful castle of silver that sparkled in the moonlight. The yard was filled with tiny fairies.

"They are busy pouring honey into the blossoms so that all will be ready for the bee when the sun arises," explained the Imp. "They must work all night," said Dotty when she thought of mother's garden. "Next is the home of the Winds," said the Imp, and Dotty could see them waving the trees and she waved back.

They soon reached the Palace of Dreams. A gate swung open and the little boat drifted in. A great black spider sat at the door of his webby house and he laughed when he saw Dotty take hold of the Imp's hand, and he came out to the boat. "Don't be afraid, I am the weaver of dreams. I spin them on my loom and send them down to earth," said the spider, and the boat sailed on. Along the shore hopped several Green Frogs.

"What are the Frogs for?" asked Dotty, and the Imp told her they were the dream witches. Dotty had heard of them before. Soon the little boat floated into the Castle of Dreams itself, and the King was busy giving out his orders to the little Imps that ran back and forth. He bowed to Dotty, and his long, white hair sparkled in the moonlight. "He must be very old," said Dotty, and the Imp told her he was as old as time. "Give me the throne," called a gruff voice, and in rushed a ball of gold, and out jumped the Sunbeam Elves, and frightened the Moon Imps away. Dotty sat up in bed, and sure enough the sun was shining in her window.

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST

By Anabel Worthington.

Even in competition with the afternoon blouse the simple, tailored blouse always shines out as an indispensable garment. It is a perfect boon to the business woman and to the housekeeper who discards her morning work dress for the waist and skirt costume, for walking, shopping or in which to spend the afternoon at home.

The smart blouse in the picture is ideal for combining with one of the new semi-tailored skirts. It is of full, comfortable cut, with the back extending over the shoulders at front to give the popular shoulder yoke effect. The waist fronts have their fulness gathered at this point, giving a graceful line to the garment. The broad collar is as collars of the times are—deep, and straight across the back, a correct finish for the V neck at front. The well liked front closing is with pearl buttons. Sleeves set in without fulness may be in either three-quarter or full length; the flare cuff, button trimmed, gives snappy style when the long sleeve is chosen.

The shops are just full of new spring fabrics for blouses and the wise woman will buy a quantity for her sewing room, before the best are carried away by some one who is after the first pick. Linens are good; voile, satin and like fabrics are other favorites.

The waist pattern No. 8,143 cuts in sizes 20-22 based on 36 inch bust. To make in size 26 requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.
