WILLS WOMEN MAKE.

MANY REASONS WHY THEY ARE OFTEN ERRATIC.

Infamiliarity With Laws Governing the Devising of Property Is One Stumbling Block, and Their Own Changeable Minds Is Another.

In making her last will and testament woman has much more to contend with than the superstition common to both sexes-that the making of one's will hastens the approach of death. It is not a subject that either party likes to talk about, and the only advice taken is that of the family lawyer, and most women are debarred from taking that step by the fear that he will tell his wife or other female relative. Another disadvan-tage under which a woman labors is her own ignorance of the law of the state in which she lives and which may forbid her devising any of her property on a technicality of age, the consent of her busband-if married-and many conflicting red tape laws that serve as materia for a long course of litigation on the part of her heirs. Finally her own changeable will offers a serious stumbling block in the way of formulating a cast iron document which shall resist the lapse of years and repose peacefully in the iron box of the safety vault until the death of the testatrix.

The natural woman would want to add a codicil to her last will and testament at least once a week. She is not to blame for this. The average woman is the real owner of anything beyond a few gowns or rings of association. She is pathetically poor in her own right, and some of the wills which these respectable paupers make are their own testimony to their state of indigence.

A woman of my acquaintance made her will, writing out on a single sheet of paper in unlegal language a disposal of her few expensive garments, such as "my new sealskin cloak," or specifying "my soltaire diamond engagement ring;" also "my watch set with diamonds," and then hid the document in her pocket and forgot all about it. But one day she saw her husband chuckling over a paper he was reading, and on asking him what it was that amused him received the answer: "Your last will and testament, my dear. I found it lying on the floor, where you must have dropped it."

He ought not to have laughed, for it left everything she possessed to him "in case he should ever need them." More pathetic still is this document, which was written in lead pencil and found among the effects of a young mother:

"To my dear son, Henry, I leave my watch set with diamonds, two diamond rings, penholder of gold and rubber and the best of my silk dresses, which in-clude new black silk grenadine with chiffon trimmings, tan striped taffeta, black satin skirt and blue corded evening dress without sleeves, to be kept for him until he shall have wife and children to whom he can give these things as curis ous, old fashioned gowns once worn by his mother; also I give to him my new canvas covered trunk, in which he can pack and keep these dresses. I have tried to teach my son the right way to live. He is a good boy, and I hope he will grow to be a good man, and if he will follow those instructions he will be.

"If your lips would keep from slips, Two things observe with care—
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how and when and where.

"These are the wishes of his moth-

I recall the making of a Quaker will where the family were assembled in council, and the eldest daughter, who was home from a distance, sat among them and after a long silence rose and said:
"Mother, thee need not put me in thy will. I have had my share already, and I hereby renounce all rights to everything thee hast, except the black marble table in the front room." She sat down, and another long silence ensued, when her sister rose.

"Thee cannot have that table, Elizabeth. I want it for myself." Silence again and as protracted as before, and Elizabeth, the party of the first part, stood up.

"Mother, I will not be left out of thy will. Thee will please give us share and share alike. I will have my rightful A member of another family was always changing her will, as she quar-reled frequently with those whom she had named as legatees. On one occasion she appeared at the door of the family sitting room and asked excitedly how they spelled the werd "cross." She had forgotten, she said, whether it began with a "c" or a "k." They told her, and she went away. Then the members of that family looked at each other, and one of them said:

"She has quarreled with Cousin Amy, and she is going to give her diamond cross to some one else."

Women seldom make long wills. Mrs. Women seidom make long wins. Also William C. Whitney, who was Flora Payne, made a will that only covered one sheet of ordinary paper, leaving to her husband a personal fortune of $3,000,000, which was invested and everything she posthusband a personal fortune of $3,000,000, all her jewels and everything she possessed, and making him the only executor of the will. The will of Julia C. Conkling, widow of Roscoe Conkling, was even shorter than Mrs. Whitney's, yet the magnitude of the interests conveyed may be estimated by an exception. veyed may be estimated by an excepting clause bequeathing $50,000 to her son-in-

Mrs. Sarah English of Williamsburg, who died childless, left $500 for the "comfortable maintenance" of her four "comfortable maintenance" of her four pet cats, "to maintain them in the style to which they had been accustomed."

Quite often some woman will leave an elaborate will-giving in detail much personal property and real estate when she had never possessed any of the property specified. One woman added a codicil to her will that the property therein named should have been hers, but for some unknown reason it had never materialized, but it was a comfort to donate it in imagination as she would have done had it been real.

No woman could have been guilty of the idiosyncrasy of making a will containing 9,000 words and then waiting until nearly half the beneficiaries were dead before dying with the will unchanged, as the late John I. Plair did-"Does your little dog know any tricks?"

"Oh, yes," said the little girl. "Speak "I don't hear his speaking," said the visitor after the command had been re-

Sugar In the Human System. Sugar is a substance that dissolved easily and in considerable quantity in water. When in solution it easily passes through animal's membrane by esmosis, and so the question of its absorption seemed simple enough. The disease diabetes showed, however, that sugar might exist very plentifully in the blood and yet the nutrition of an individual suffer very system was necessary to secure its consumption by the tissues. Bernard thought that the liver was active in the consumption of sugar and that disease of this organ caused diabetes. He therefore secured some of the blood going to the liver of a living animal and some of the blood that was just leaving it. To his surprise, the else besides its mere presence in the blood leaving the liver contained more sugar than that entering it. After assuring himself that his observations were correct, he tried his experiments in different ways. He found that even in the blood leaving the liver of an animal that had been fed only on substances containing no sugar, sugar could be demonstrated Even in a fasting animal the liver it. self and the blood leaving it showed the presence of a form of sugar.

The only possible conclusion from this was that the liver was capable of manufacturing this form of sugar out of nonsugar containing material, or even from the blood of a fasting ani-

Converting the Chinaman When I first met him the Greek archimandrite had been 40 years in Peking, and had never been anywhere else except for two caravan journeys to Russia. He was an elderly gentleman, with a smile like Benjamin Franklin's, and was famed at the Chinese capital for keeping the best wines and the best tobacco. He was a bachelor, and today I recall him when I try to fancy Epicurus in the body. wore the Chinese pigtail and clothes to match, and people said he could give Chinese mandarins points on etiquette. He gave me, at least, many happy hours, for he talked with a frankness and facility rarely united in a Russian, least of all an archimandrite.

One day, for instance, I asked him bluntly how many converts he had made. He answered that he thought he had made one, but he did not wish to be taken as stating this positively. When I returned to China after an interval of 21 years, all my inquiries led me to respect the honesty of this Russian. He said, furthermore:

"I have been here 40 years, and perhaps I have converted one Chinaman. When missionaries tell you that they have done more than that, do not befieve them."-Poultney Bigelow North American Review.

A Circus Horse In Battle. Colonel Charles Marshall, who was ald-de-camp to General Robert E. Lee and who went through the battles of the war with his chief, told the fol lowing amusing story of his experience with a new horse: His old horse had been shot from under him in the fight of the previous day, and he had taken possession of an animal that seemed to suit the work. In the battle a few hours later he was riding across a field in which there were numerous stumps. Suddenly the performance cpened. The guns roared and the air was filled with smoke and noise. Before Colonel Marshall knew what was happening the horse had his four feet on one of the stumps and was gayly dancing in a circle. In the mean time the firing was increasing, and the situation was anything but comfortable, but the horse kept on as if he were enjoying it. "It was not until afterward," said Colonel Marshall, "that I found the horse had belonged to a circus and had been trained to do this act amid the firing of cannon."

The Track Foreman. The track foreman actually accounts for a greater proportion of the railroad's expenditures than any other employee, because the greatest cost of railroading is in the roadbed, and its equipment and the expense of maintaining it. The track foreman is in fact an important employee, but about the only time a passenger ever sees his sunburned face is while he is being whisked by between stations at 60 miles an hour.

The Neatest Town In the World. Brock, in Holland, is far famed as the "neatest town in the world." This town is so fastidious that until a few years ago horses were not allowed in its streets for reasons of cleanliness, and the entire town is as scrupulously kept as a man-of-war. It is a village of 2,700 inhabitants, the main industry of which is the making of Edam cheeses

Honest Use of Paine's Celery Compound Will Permanently Panish Your Troubles.

THE GREAT COMPOUND GUAR-ANTEES NEW LEASE OF LIFE.

It is pitiable to see the half-heartel and almost useless attempts made by many people to get rid of their poor health. More determined efforts and greater energy would be put forth to chieve a victory in any other undertaking.

Too many are believers in "fatalism;" others make use of almost any-thing that is recommended by neighbors, while many are quite satisfied if temporary relief is afforded. If Paine's Celery Compound be used to cleanse the blood, to regulate and tone the nerves, to banish rheumatism, neuralgia, headaches, kidney disease and dyspepsia, then be assured the good work is fully and permanent-y accomplished.

It is positively criminal and foolish for young or old to mope around in a have sick condition and shut their eyes to the grand blessings offered by Paine's Celery Compound. The world knows no other medicine as good for fortifying and building up the system to battle against the trying and varying weather of autumn.

Go to your druggist at once and procure a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound and see how soon the "blues" will vanish; your nervous depression, headache, backache, rheuma-tism and neuralgia will go and permanent health, activity and happiness will be yours.

A childless home is a cheerless home The maternal instinct exists in every woman, and when it is ungratified she is deprived of much of the happiness of life. It often happens that child-lessness is due to some cause which can be removed, and often is removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Pre-scription. E. & D. BICYCLES

The great reason for the goodness of E. & D. bearings lies in their fourpoint design. The load passes directly through the balls, and there is no opportunity for the balls to jam.

In E. & D. four-point bearings the weight on any one point in the bearing is never more than 1-8th of the weight of the rider. In ordinary bicycles, the immense leverage between cup and cone bearings and cone cuts the bearings and breaks the balls.

To show how little the wear on E. & D. four-point bearings is, we first guarantee them for three years, and, secondly, we oil them at the beginning of the season, and at the end, upon examination, the oil will be found-clear.
