Many of these coats are more attractive, for dark colors are no longer thought necessary. In one way, at least, the lighter shades are best, for they do not show dust so soon as deep blue, green and black. A black coat is perhaps worst of all, white and gray showing dust less readily. Lost Heavily in Ohio.

T. B. Macaulay, secretary of the Sun Life, attributed the losses to mismanagement of the Ohio chain by Appleyard, who controlled the system. The so-called "Appleyard System" of railways was one beginning at Dayton, Ohio, and running to Springfield and Columbus. The Sun Life bought securities from Appleyard on the understanding that he should take them back at an increase. It was really a loan to Appleyard.

When the time of repurchase came, Appleyard had no funds and so owed the company $539,000. To repay this he sold the Sun Life large blocks of bonds and stocks. Later these deteriorated in value and the company dy road is encountered.

T. B. Macaulay said the case proved the necessity of the company securing control before investing largely in securities of any enterprise.

Cornwall Railway.

Mr. Shepley took up the matter of the Cornwall Street Railway, which the Sun Life finds on its hands after losing on his securities. Witness said it was an early investment and the company has more experience now.

Another case of loss was the Levis County Railway and the Montreal Terminal Railway.

Speaking of the latter security, Commissioner Kent amused the commission by asking witness whether he did not think that the Sun Life bonds in this road was not the reason why it so long continued to be a nuisance to the people of Montreal.

Witness replied that he had been converted from the idea that it was profitable to invest in securities of a competing road.

THE BATHS OF BATH. Their Ancient History - Successful

Municipal Enterprise That Is Many Hundreds of Years Old. Probably no municipal enterprise has been so much identified with the social and literary history of Great Britain as that in the hands of the cor-social and literary history of Great Britain as that in the hands of the corporation of Bath. The hot springs at this famous spa have been used for certainly eighteen centuries, while legend identifies them with a royal patient 600 years before Christ. It is certain that the Romans knew their healing powers, for the wonderful system of baths which they built around them may be seen to-day in a unique state of preservation, and are, like the springs from which they are still supplied, among the most preclous possessions of any municipality. That the corporation of Bath are fully alive to the character of their trust is evidenced by the manner in which the modern bathing establishments have been extended and beautified in recent years. In these establishments all the latest scientific methods of applying mineral waters in the alleviation of human suffering have been installed, while the sum expended upon baths and auxiliary buildings within living memory would probably be little short of a quarter of a million.

It is an interesting fact in commection with the hot springs of Bath that there is no record of any diminution in their volume from earliest times. Their daily yield exceeds half a million gallons, rising from the earth at a temperature of 183 deg. Fahr., a temperature unaffected by summer's heat

Their daily yield exceeds that a limited path on spilons, rising from the earth at a temperature of 183 deg. Fahr., a temperature unaffected by summer's heat or winter's cold, the longest drought or the heaviest rainfall. The Bath springs are the only really hot springs in the British Isles, the nearest approach to them as regards their heat being the springs of Buxton, which rise at 82 deg. To the tourist and those fond of antiquarian pursuits, however, the greatest interest naturally centres in the winque evidences of the Roman occupation of Britain which have been brought to light at this famous resort during the past quarter of a century. Among the remains disclosed are five large plunge baths, the construction and planning of which place it beyond doubt that the system of

are two marge planning of which place it beyond doubt that the system of thermae which the Romans constructed must have been of great extent and architectural splendor. These baths are in an almost perfect state of preservation, being still fed and discharged by the culverts of ancient use. The largest of the baths occurpted a hall 110ft. by 63ft., its water surface measuring 22ft, by 40ft. The original pavements or scholae surrounding it remain in a good state of preservation, as well as the rectangular and semi-circular recesses or exedrae, as at Pompeli, three on each of the larger sides.

The floor of the large bath is en-The floor of the large bath is entirely coated with lead, weighing 40lb, to the foot, there being more than forty tons used in covering it. This lead was probably obtained from the Roman mines in the Mendip Hills, in Somersetshire, pigs of lead having been found there bearing the stamps of Claudius and Vernagian while the of Claudius and Vespasian, while the baths themselves were constructed of the stone obtained from the hills around Bath, where now exist the quarries of Bath stone.

There has also been excavated the

There has also been excavated the huge octagonal Roman wall, built to enclose the area of the principal spring (a remarkable example of Roman masonry), which to-day serves as a reservoir from which the hot water is pumped to supply the modern baths. This well encloses a surface toff, by 40ft, and is situated beneath the floor of the historic King's Bath, the latter receiving the overflow from the spring. Connected with the ancient baths were heating chambers of cient baths were heating chambers the spring. Connected with the ancient baths were heating chambers or hypocausts, forming a system of hot. dry baths, corresponding to the present-day Turkish baths.

Despite the considerable revenue from the baths, so broad-minded as the policy pursued in their control that, besides the annual receipts, which average £11,000, being absorbed in their upkeep, a further charge on the rates of £3,000 is necessary.

So remarkable is the similarity in the choice of municipal undertakings between Bath and Harrogate, the spas of the north and west, that a comparison of the results will doubtless prove interesting. Finapically, at any rate, the bathing establishments of Harrogate are in a much more prosperous condition than their rivals in the west. Although for many years the Harrogate baths showed a loss of £600 an nually on the working, this year has been a record one, and a profit of £750 to the good has been set askide this year. The comparison between the two "mineral water" towns will go further. Whereas the Yorkshire resorthare erected modern municipal mar-

"mineral water" towns will go fur-ther. Whereas the Yorkshire resort have erected modern municipal mar-kets, of which they are justly proud, the older markets at Bath have prac-tically fallen into disuse. Only £100 finds its way into the coffers of the local exchequer annually as profit from that source:

local exchequer annually as profit from that source;

Again, Bath is found to come a bad second with its electric light undertaking when compared with that of Harrogate. Both towns embarked on a similar scheme in the same year, 1897, but whereas the latter town makes £1,700 a year towards the relief of rates from this industry. Bath is out of pocket at the end of each year to the tune of £132.

Perhaps the excuse for this can be found in the facts that, while the total receipts average £16,000, the working expenses swallow up haif, and more than the balance of £8,000 has to be paid away in interest and repayment on the capital outlay.

In the matter of supplying water for domestic purposes, although a profit of £300 made yearly by the Bath

In the matter of supplying water for domestic purposes, although a profit of £300 made yearly by the Bath corporation is not large for such an undertaking, it must be considered prosperous when compared with Harrogate's similar concern. Further, until three years ago, when a large outlay was necessary for the extension of the supply, £3,000 represented the profit made. Harrogate also had the difficulty of finding the demand on top of the supply, and the money spent in trying to cope with it has resulted in a charge on the rates annually of £4,000. But in one respect Bath scores heavily over the Yorkshire "cure" town. It owns estates in and around the town which benefit the corporation finances to the extent of £10,000 each year.

The Illinois Venture.

Discussing the Illinois traction venture at the morning session Mr. Macaulay explained that the Sun Life financed the entire scheme except for a little aid given by Hon. T. B. McKinley of Illinois.

In 1903 the Sun Life bought a large block of Illinois Central Traction preferred stock from McKinley. A month later part of this was bought from the company by directors of the Sun Life.

The books showed only one transaction which took in the directors as well as the company.

of the height of land and east to the Quebec boundary.

Last year 690 Indians were treated with, and this year 915 have agreed to the terms, making 1,605 in all.

Reserves have been set aside for each band of Indians, subject to appeal of the Provincial Government. It is stated that some very choice pine timber land is included in these reserves, and there may be more to be heard about this phase of the treaty.

action which took in the directors as well as the company.

Mr. Macaulay was called upon to explain this. He said the directors had intended to take a part in the stock, but had misunderstood the date of the deal and they simply took their share later. No written evidence is extant to show that this was the original intention of the directors.

Asked by Mr. Shepley how long it would take the Sun Life to get rid of the sort of stocks they had been investing in largely should a law be passed forbidding insurance companies such investments, Mr. Macaulay said ten years, and launched into a warm defence of the company's attitude, stating that Canada did not offer scope for investment.

When the tip of a dog's nose is cold and moist, that dog is not sick. A feverish, dry nose means sickness with a dog. And so with the human lips. Dry, cracked and colorless lips mean feverishness, and are as well ill appearing. To have beautiful, pink, velvet-like lips, apply at bedtime a coating of Dr. Shoop's Green Salve. It will soften and heal any skin ailment. Get a free, trial box, at our store, and be convinced. Large, nickel capped glass jars, 25 cents.

A Valuable Agent.

The giveerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demuleant, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherybark, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that giverine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root. Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherybark in promoting digretion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryageal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not no effective. It is in the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures. Send for and read the little book of extracts, treating of the properties and uses of the several medicinal roots that enter into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and learn on alcohol or harmful, habit-forming drug.
