

GLEANNINGS.

It was rather personal a California newspaper man to chronicle the purchase of a wife by a brother editor as a "remarkable instance of self-possession."

A North Carolina editor expresses the hope that the lives of a certain newly-married couple in his neighborhood may be "glad as the thrashing of angels in empyrean space."

Queen Victoria has made a baronet of Mr. William Wallace, the heir of the Marquis of Hertford, as a reward for the activity and liberality he displayed in taking care of the sick and wounded in Paris during its great trial.

The good Quaker, John King, was the first treetotaler in Great Britain, he is now seventy-four years old, and living with his fourth wife. All the treetotalers in the British monarchy are about to put up a penny each for the venerable King with his fourth wife.

The editor of the Cape Ann Messenger mildly says: "The business men of a Western town have presented to their editor a fine horse and buggy, as an evidence of their appreciation of his paper. We hope there will be no such trick played upon anybody here in New country."

Mr. Gladstone, the Premier of England, is about to give his daughter in marriage to the Rev. Mr. Duckworth, lately tutor to Prince Leopold, a great favorite at court, and has the merit of being a very good man, and the advantage of being considered very handsome. Should he retain the favor of Queen and minister, his chances of preferment are prime, and he is said to deserve it.

Is Munich the government allows no couple to marry until it is assured that they possess the means of support. And it is not enough that the man is in good health, that he has a trade, and is a skilful workman; nor that the woman also is strong and willing to work. They must wait until they have actually earned enough to satisfy those in authority. The length to which this law goes in its conception, is carried cause immense evil and sorrow.

The retirement in which Queen Victoria lives is not merely a freak on her part; it is, in a great measure, rendered imperative by the state of her health. She suffers very much from a kind of nervousness, which might very easily pass into a more serious malady under the strain of an exciting and fatiguing public life. She is also subject to giddiness and nausea when holding a lever, or in any other crowded assembly. The doctors recommend frequent change of air and a quiet life; and there can be no doubt that, considering the hereditary condition of the family, they have strong reasons for giving this advice in a very peremptory manner.

The French have a story that Sir Walter Scott once offered his youngest daughter for choice between a dowry of 100,000 francs or "Queenin Darward." She asked to read the MS., took it seraphically to a publisher, found that he would give her 120,000 francs, and dutifully and meekly told her father that she would rather have the MS. than the money. Sir Walter was deeply touched by this mark of filial devotion. The Paris journal which tells the story, says that a French girl would never have done such a thing as that. She would simply have taken the 100,000 francs, and—she would have found some way to get possession of the romance also.

A touching occurrence has just taken place at the little village of Longbourn, in Dorsetshire, England. The curate was engaged to marry the only child of the vicar. He was taken ill, and the marriage-service, at his earnest wish, was celebrated by special dispensation as he lay on his deathbed. The day after his burial, was to have been that of his marriage. The wedding cake, which had been provided, was cut at his funeral. The coffin, of polished oak, handsomely ornamented, was placed in the drawing-room, having upon it a purple and white pall, upon which was placed an exquisitely beautiful heart-shaped garland of lilies, orange blossoms, and other delicate flowers. In the centre was a small cross, similarly composed. The mourners wore white crape hat-bands those who preceded the body white silk hat-bands, and all, including the bearers, white kid gloves. A hymn was sung in the church, and another in the church-yard after the coffin, with its floral ornaments, had been lowered into the grave.
