EARTHQUAKE IN ENGLAND.

On Tuesday morning the shock of an earthquake—doubtless the lighter vibration from some serious but remote convulsion—was fell with more or less severity, throughout Liverpool and the whole of whis district. The time—about which all parties are pretty nearly agreed—was half-past four e'clock; and the shock was accompanied, according to several of our informants, by a rambling roise. The sensations for the most part experienced were these :—the chaking of acciding of dueses, the raising and undulating of beds, the clastering of moreoable articles, the benging of shore, and the rattling of window-frames. In general, there was a sort of upheaving, followed by a quick ribration, similar to the shock a ship experiences when strack by a beavy sen; and then, as it were, staggering and trembling from the concession. One gentleman, residing in Birtenhead, describes it as though a giant had entered his chamber, and suiging a post in either hand, given his bed a thorough shaking for a minute or so, and vanished. The impression of another, who lives in Claughton-park, and whose house has never been affected by the heaviest gales, was that he had been awakesee by some of the servants jumping with all their weight upon the floor above.

Many persons were very seriously alarmed, increasing that bur-EARTHQUAKE IN ENGLAND.

I admit, that much may be done by arguments and moral smanion,—by appeals founded on a due regard to health, happines and salvation,—as has been heretofore done, to arrest the progress of this great evil: in reference to numbers of persons, it has been, and will be, all that is needd. But, I wish to show why some believe that moral suasion into all that is successey. Permit me to ask, why not rely on moral suasion, and appeals to the conscience, in regard to other evils? Why not extend the principle you advocate, to horse-stealing, burglary, and areas? In creary community, there are men who must be restrained by Law,—nee who was the restrained by Law,—nee who place themselves beyond the induces of moral suasions. But the plea that what they do is feed.

The sanction of the law fortiles our opponents, and, in some degree, justifies their appeals to popular sympathy; as, in the estimation of sansy persons, the same and the state of the law fortiles our opponents, and, in some degree, justifies their appeals to popular sympathy; as, in the estimation of sansy persons, the same as they say to make it involving the same to be a right. What grounds of appeal have you to such mean as may choose to plead this satetion as their sidelid! Very likely, from personal regard, they will answer you as Agrippa answered Paul. Believing it to be a wrong principle, the authorize and regulating the traffic in alcoholic liquors; and we recommend the substitution of appeal bare to the shadow of a doubt, under the insidious influence of adiabolical delusion. I am, Sir, Yours, &c., JOHN ARBUCKLE. Charlottetown, Nov. 30, 1852.

It has seldom fallen to our lot, to record such a continuance of disagreeable weather as has been experienced for upwards of a month past. The streets have been almost impassable. On Wednesday, the 24th, we had a heavy fall of snow; which was succeeded by a gale of wind, as furious as any that have preceded it. Much injury has been done to the forest trees, and those of the groves, and the ornamental wood about the town have suffered severely,—many having been uprooted, and the tops of others, between the violence of the wind and the weight of the snow, broken off. Yesterday and to day are mild, something like the Indian number. We trust to-day are mild, something like the Indian summer: we it will continue.

which sailed for London on Sunday last, we notice Thomas Heath Haviland, Esq., and Miss Haviland—the latter, we are sorry to say, in a very precarious state of health. Mr. Haviland carries with him the sympathy and respect of his fellow townsmen and the people at large, and a sincere wish that it may please Providence to afford that relief to his suffering relative, that it is alone in its power to bestow. Few who have filled so many and such important offices and situations of trust in Prince Edward Island, have retired with an much honor and credit to himself as he has; and with so much honor and credit to himself as he has; fewer still, during a long service, have made so many frie and so few enemies. We wish him a safe and pleasant v age, and a speedy return to his family.

and so few enemies. We wish him a safe and pleasant voyago, and a speedy return to his family.

The Steamer Ellen Gisberne returned to this Port, from Cape Traverse, at an early hour on Wadnesday, the 24th instant, in the midst of a heavy snow storm, after having succeeded in lying down the sub-marine cable between Cape Termentine, in the Province of New Branswick, and Carlton thead on this Island. Mr. Gisborne made several attempts to tay the cable down before he finally succeeded on Monday night last. The water being shallow on the opposite coast, the vessel containing the cable could not get within one mile of the shore, consequently, that length of eable had to be taken on shore, which was accomplished with considerable difficulty, by means of a kedge-anchor and the united strength of four horses and four oxen. One end of the cable being made fast round a post, the Steamer soon after got under weigh, at about five o'clock in the evening, and reached the shore on this Island about five on the following morning, having been upwards of eleven hours engaged in laying the cable. Mr. Gisborne informs us he had a very ardsoon task to perform, the wind and tide sweeping the vessel fast down to the westward, in spite of all they could do, and that he was fearfully apprehensive his cable would run short before he reached the opposite shore, but fortunately he had three quarters of a mile to spare when he reached the Island. In this difficult undertaking, at this inclement scason of the year, Mr. Gisborne was ably assisted by Capt. Kennedy, of this town; and to use his own word—" had it not been for the very valuable assistance rendered by Capt. Kennedy, of this town; and to use his own word—" had it not been for the very valuable assistance rendered by Capt. Kennedy, of this town; and to use his own word—" had it not been for the very valuable assistance rendered by Capt. Kennedy, of this town; and to use his own word—" had it not been for the very valuable assistance rendered by Capt. Kennedy, of this town; and to u

The line of Posts on the opposite shore, from Ambeist, are erroted within five miles of the Cape, and will be completed in a few days. On this Island, we understand, some ten or twelve miles are ap, and that the whole of the line to Carlton liend will be finished in the course of two weeks. This line, when complete, any Mr. Gisborre, will be the most unistantial, and cheapen, were yet erected in any part of the world.—[st.]

The line of wire terminates at the Town Hall, where the Company will, by permission of the Government, keep its office. We understand that in the course of a week, the Telegraph will be in fall operation.

On Friday night last, the 19th inst., James Bogen, of Cherry Valley, violectly and berbarously assuated William Foung, of Gallows Point, with a fire-shoved and pitch-fork, breaking the small-bone of his arm, and inflicting thirteen severe wounds on his body. Doctor Hobkirk saw him on Sunday last, and considers him in a very dangerous state.—Com. to Isl.
