For the different kinds and Quantities of Ma-nures time of sowing &c., reference can be had to the notes kept by us during our inspection. In some Fields near Charlottetown Manuring too heavy was very perceptable. In our case (where 38 Loads was Plonghed down in the fall and 70 Loads put in the Drills in the spring) the Turnips shewd the most Luxuriant growth in fact a person could hardly walk through them but when they were pulled the bulbs were small coarse and of an ill shape and necks to them from 6 inches to a foot long,--this shews that an over dose of Manure is not commendable the Cultivation of the First and second prize Crops is confirmatory of these re-marks from 35 to 50 Loads of well rotton Ma-nure per Aere according to the state of the soil we consider to be amply sufficient and if what nure per Acre according to the state of the soil we consider to be amply sufficient and if what

The cultivation generally we have no hesita-tion in saying is good and very creditable to the Farmers whose Fields we vialted ; here and there are some defects which we will endeavor to point out, in doing which we hope we shall not be thought presumptuous and hope our re-marks will be acceptable to the society. We doubt very much the propriety of allow-ing Farmers to compete for prizes for Turnipy who do not practize a regular rotation of Crop-ging which as far as we could ascertain is not generally done.

to the seed, which gives it a vigorous growth and shooth it quickly past injury from the fly. I have found this method give me better crops than twice the quan-tity of manures, either ploughed in breadcast er cov-eved in the drills. Our soil is light, and soon parts with the manure applied to it; it is therefore bed economy to give over-dozes of manure;—on such soils, fight and frequent dreamings will yield much more profitable returns during the rotation than over-dozes at more distant intervals of time. Turnip land must be in fair condition, and of course must receive a moderate dressing; but the great secret, I believe, in raising good crops of Swedes at moderate azpence, is in having some stimulating manure close to the seed. From my hen-house shoke hat winter I collected suf-ficient för 10 drills—being con-third of an area,—and the contents of the privy during the winter mixed up ficient for 10 drills--being one-third of an arre,--and the contents of the privy during the winter mixed up with sawdest and cat-shellings furnished sufficient for an arre. I mention this to shew how, with a little attention, every one can make up sufficient "home-made gnane" for a good patch of turnips, hoping that our farmers will turn their attention to saving and testing them subsche turnels. testing these valuable stimulants.
