KIDNEY DISEASE.

Diseases of the Kidneys are numerous, from the fact that these organs act as filters to the blood, and form one of the great channels for the removal of impurities from the system, which, if allowed to remain, give rise to the various kidney affections, such as Dropsy, Diabetes, and Bright's Disease.

The following are some of the symptoms of kidney disease:—Backache, sideache, swelling of the feet and ankles, frequent thirst, puffiness under the eyes, floating specks before the eyes, and all disorders of the urinary system, such as frequent, thick, cloudy, scanty, or highly colored urine.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS are exactly what the name suggests. They are not a cure-all, but are a specific for kidney troubles only. Price 50 cents per box, or 6 for $1.35. All dealers, or THE DOAN KIDNEY PILL CO., Toronto, Ont.

Life has shamed that in our blindness we don't see; no doubt it is did. That the milk of human kindness is adulterated, too.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Gents.—After suffering for seven years with inflammatory rheumatism so bad that I was eleven months confined to my room, and for two years could not dress myself without help, you again gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT in May, 1897, and asked me to try it which I did, and was so well pleased with the results, I procured more. Five bottles completely cured me, and I have had no return of the pain for eighteen months. The above facts are well known to everybody in this village and neighborhood.

Yours gratefully,
A. DAIRT,
St. Timothee, Que., 16th May, '99

A baby's voice comes out of the darkness.

Pessimists.—I do not believe there is a truly honest man in the world. "Sir," said a common-sense friend, "it is quite impossible that any one man should know all the world, but it is very possible that some one man may know himself."

A Little Talk on Ventilation.

Ventilation in winter is a vexed subject, and there are many opinions as to how it should be done. In buildings where an elaborate scientific system is employed, the ventilation looks out for itself if the system is properly worked, but in ordinary dwelling-houses where ventilation is obtained by means of windows and doors it is another matter. One good suggestion is to charge the air in a room often. "If ventilation, by opening wide all the windows to the outside air of rooms and other enclosed spaces, be systematized and performed at fixed times, say before each meal, and for a fixed period, say five minutes each time, the lack of fresh air in such places and the diseases now caused by such lack of fresh air would be in most cases prevented. If such rooms or spaces be vacated at such times, such airing would be effected without their usual occupants suffering more than a temporary inconvenience. Those who vacate such rooms or spaces, if they are obliged to go into the open air, must be kept moving to prevent their taking cold while absent from the room vacated. But where rooms or enclosed spaces adjacent, such rooms or spaces can be vacated and ventilated, as above-named, alternately, and those who vacate them can go into the adjoining room or space instead of into the open air during the process, which need occupy only five minutes at a time three or four times daily.

"To empty bad air out of a room and fill it with good air is simple, and need take no longer than to empty dirty water out of a large bottle and fill it with fresh water. The colder the open air as compared with the air of the room to be ventilated, the more speedily will the bad air rush out of the room and fresh air take its place, as soon as the windows or doors are opened. The more the windows or doors are opened, and the wider each of said windows or doors is open, the quicker will the desired change of the air take place and the less the room will be cooled in the process, and the sooner the windows may be closed and the occupants return to the now well-aired room. When the air of a room or other enclosed space is changed rapidly by setting all its windows wide open, the room or space itself has no time to get cold, not even cold. Walls, floor, ceilings, and whatever furniture it has, remain warm, and so are warm to the touch of those coming back into it, as soon as the windows are closed, and the fresh air in it is quickly warmed by coming in contact with its walls, floor, ceiling, etc. Discomfort and the risk of taking cold from opening the windows to change the air of a room are lessened in proportion to the rapidity of the operation.

"The converse of this is also true. The longer the time taken to change the air of a room or other segregated space of space the colder it gets, or parts of it gets, and the more certain those entering it or remaining in it are to take cold from the drafts of air, or chilled atmosphere, or chill-draughts so produced.

We learn from the St. John (New Brunswick) "Monitor" that Right Rev. John Cameron, who is dean of the Canadian hierarchy, celebrated Pontifical Mass in his cathedral, Antigonish, N. S., at 5 o'clock on Christmas morning, and immediately after celebrated two low Masses. His Lordship will soon complete his seventy-eighth year. Despite his advanced years, Bishop Cameron is in excellent health, and intends to make his "ad limina" visit to Rome next April.

Don Lorenzo Perosi's new sacred cantata, composed for the feast of the Immaculate, has been performed with success at the Vatican and at the Church of La Minerva under the composer's direction. The work is for soli, chorus and orchestra. It is stated that Pope Pius X., who is known to be a great lover of music, intends to have a hall built expressly for performances of sacred music, oratorios and cantatas which he does not wish to be given in churches or theatres. Don Lorenzo Perosi would be the musical director of this hall.

An "Academy" in all known languages was held in honor of the Immaculate Conception at the great International College of Propaganda Fide, Rome, whose students come from the four quarters of the globe, and is certainly a type of the universality of our Holy Mother the Church, who makes no distinction between black and white, Latin or Greek, but ordains the dusky negro side by side with fair-faced Teuton or tawny Hindoo. On this particular occasion the students pronounced discourses on the glories of Our Lady, or on special liturgical invocation of her, in their various mother tongues.

The Holy Father is now seventy years of age.

The Ontario Government has made a grant of $10,000 to the University of Ottawa, which splendid Catholic institution was destroyed by fire a little over a year ago.

A telegram from Rome states that the Vatican Biblical Commission has received eight essays in competition for the $100 prize presented by Lord Bray, the subject being "The Vulgate."

The death of Cardinal Lavigerie, Archbishop of Algiers, has reduced the number of Cardinals to sixty-three. The Sacred College when full consists of seventy, counting Rheims. There are ten vacant sees in France.

The Gaidon (Paris) following good advice appropriate to the opening days of the New Year: "Train yourself to keep your troubles to yourself. Don't pour them out upon acquaintances or strangers. It isn't their fault if you have troubles, and they don't want to hear of yours because they have so many of their own."

"After all," says the Northwest Review, "holiness is what ensures the spiritual life of Catholics. The example of one truly holy man is a tower of strength for an entire nation. Think of what the Cure d'Aud did fifty years ago for the religious life of the French people. Think of the blessed influence in later years of Dom Bosco in Italy and throughout the Catholic world."

Announcement is made of the death of the Right Rev. Dr. Lewis Parroli, Vicar Apostolic of Hong-Kong, an alumnus of the Seminary for Foreign Missions at Millar. He passed away on December 27, at a hospice of the Brothers of St. John of God in Italy. A telegram received at the Milan Seminary announces the death of Mgr. Simone Volonteri, Vicar Apostolic of South Honan.

The "Catholic Directory" for Scotland for 1905 shows that in that country at present there are 518 parishes, 424 of these being diocesan and 94 regular, or members of religious orders. There are 227 parishes, with 372 churches, chapels and stations. The monasteries and convents number 64, the Catholic schools 202 and the Catholic population is estimated at 513,400.

"Perhaps in the whole history of intolerance there has been nothing worse than the policy inaugurated and carried out by Combes and his infidel associates," says the Catholic Universe. "Other tyrants have attacked and persecuted the Church, but these sought the overthrow of religion and the dethronement of God Himself. It was the old French Revolution awakened to new life, but equipped to carry out its purposes with more studied and systematic methods.

Writing from Rome, under date of January 7th, his Lordship, Bishop Casey of St. John, N. B., among other things says: "On Tuesday next Bishop McDonald of Charlottetown, Monsignor Chalifon and Father Viancourt of Sherbrooke, Father Masban and myself will start on a journey still further East, even to the Holy Land. We will stop at Athens, Smyrna, Constantinople, Jaffa, then to Jerusalem and Bethlehem, Nazareth, etc. In forty-two days we hope to be again in Rome, and after spending a few more days here, we will leave for the land we love best.

Once again have the hopes of well-wishers of Russia been disappointed by the action of revolutionary agitators. The thousands of workmen who thronged the approaches to the Winter Palace last Sunday had of themselves no desire to ask redress of any but industrial grievances. The demand for a constitution, a demand which it is utterly impossible under any circumstances for the Government to grant at once, was put upon their lips by the Socialist leaders who wished to use this huge strike to further their revolutionary designs. On these leaders rest the blame of last Sunday's bloodshed.—Casket.

"Die Deutsche Zeitung" recently published a special despatch from Rome stating that the opinion was prevalent in clerical circles of the Eternal City that Emperor William of Germany had secretly turned Catholic. To which the great Catholic organ, the "Kölnische Volkszeitung" ("The Cologne People's Gazette") remarks: "In better informed Catholic circles nobody believes anything of the kind. However, it is a fact that in foreign Catholic countries the opinion frequently is expressed that Emperor William is very near to the Catholic Church in matters of faith. We therefore repeat with all emphasis that this is nothing but idle imagination ("leere Phantasie"). It happens that the Emperor does not make any distinction what faith a person professes if he pleases him otherwise, but William II., is equally as far from the Catholic faith as his grandfather or father."

Amid the fears of French Catholics over the abrogation of the Concordat, the Abbe Gayraud utters some words of hope. Recognizing to the full the iniquity of the government's bill, he nevertheless thinks it will result in good for the Church. Catholics will gain their rights as citizens, and be better able to claim respect for their religious convictions once they cease to be privileged and paid. Ecclesiastical appointments will no longer be in the hands of crony politicians, and a new order of clerics, appointed solely by the Church, will emerge for the salvation of France. Old Gallican ideas will be destroyed root and branch, and the last vestiges of servitude to the State be swept away. The Catholic Church in that country, freed from tyranny and vexation, will cease to be a department of the State, administered by M. Dumy and be a sacred official of the Ministry of Worship. Hard years, of great stress and trial, will come upon her, but in the end she will make her position good, and with a hierarchy and clergy of her own choosing, will win the ground lost by her during the centuries when she has been sequestered and enclaved by the Sae. The eloquent deputy's prophecy must be tested by time.

It is stated that among recent converts in Germany, in addition to the Princess Dowager of Hesse, aunt of the Emperor William II., who has already been mentioned, are Wilhelmine von Hillern, the novelist, who has been living for years at Obersimmergau; the dramatist poet, Martin Unterwiesinger, and his wife, the well-known author, Rosa Stoll, and Dr. Ludwig Siegel, formerly a Protestant preacher, and until a short time ago professor in the Gymnasium of Breslau. It is rather a significant fact, remarks "The Messenger Magazine," that conversions to the Catholic Church, though frequent enough in Germany, are not often mentioned in the press.

Minard's Liniment relieves neuralgia.

It is a curious phenomenon of human nature that men guilty of the most heinous offences against womanhood are, when brought to trial, the recipient of a vast amount of envying sympathy and pity from women.—Sacred Heart Review.

Here is a waterword from Charles J. B. Raparte, the eminent Catholic lawyer of Baltimore, Md., which should find a place in the mind and heart of every Catholic young man who aspires to public life in the United States:—

"A Catholic, tried and found wanting in any field of public or private duty, inflames an injury on the honorable standing and salutary influence of the Catholic Church in our country, which no learning and eloquence in her defenses can repair. Our fellow-countrymen, not of our faith, believe that Catholics can be men of honor and patriotism when they see such men; unless we can show their eyes the wholesome and abundant fruit, we shall preach to deaf ears while we extol the tree which bears it."
