Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE GIFT OF CHARACTER.
Not long ago I heard two women talking over their childhood memories of Christmas. "T h e y talked about long-desired gifts that Santa Claus had brought them, about stockings and Christmas trees and Christmas Eve, and then one of them said:

"But I don't think we got any more out of anything than we did from the presents we bought for each other. You know we hadn't much money, and it did mean such a lot of contriving." (She comes from a family where there was just about enough money for the necessities of life—counting education as one of these.)

"Did you buy your presents for each other yourselves?" asked one. "Why mother used to buy ours for me. I don't believe we saw them, half the time, until they were on the tree," said the other. "She comes from a family where there was plenty of money for almost everything."

"Well, you missed half the fun of Christmas, then," said the first woman. "We children used to have the greatest times scraping together two or three dollars we spent on each other and grandfather and grandmother. I remember one year when I saved the dollar (grandfather gave me for my birthday (it came in March) for Christmas. And then I remember the year I earned some money in the summer looking after a neighbor's cat. That was a wonderful thing. I can remember every present I gave that Christmas. Someone had given us a box of soap, and I found that there were premiums for the wrappers, and so I unwrapped every cake and got father the subscription to a magazine. Then, they were doing some very simple embroidery of white cotton on checked cloth that was simple enough for me, so I made brother a ushion for canoe, and got the stuffing out of an old feather bed. And I gave grandfather the "Old Farmer's Almanac" and plunged on some embroidery scissors for sister and some fine initiated handkerchiefs for mother. I remember I could hardly wait for Christmas that year I was so sure everyone would like my presents."

Her eyes glistened with the touch of moisture that our tenderest memories are likely to bring. "Yes, anyone who never had the fun of planning presents that way certainly missed some of the best of Christmas," she concluded. "And," I added mentally, "a very fine experience in character-building."

But Could They Do More?
One often hears people of limited means wishing for more money so that they could do more for their children. Oftentimes such people are giving their children a greater gift than money could buy—the gift of character. Self-denial, the habit of working for what one wants, patience, a realization of the value of money, a simple life with high standards and ambitions—these are the forces that go to make character. True, the lack of money does not make a home desirable. Nor does the possession of money necessarily destroy the simple life. The rich man can go through the Needle's Eye. But it isn't easy.

Not Keen on Buying.

With the new pack just in the office, and huge stocks of good, had and imported goods on hand, Newfoundland Scotch cured herring dealers are said to be making frantic efforts to "get out from under." It is reported that one large New York factor in the herring trade is offering more than ten thousand packages at a price that ought to find plenty of buyers, but which, on the contrary, has failed to create even a flicker of interest. One reason for this, perhaps—a reason which we believe not altogether untenable—is that the goods are probably not of very choice quality. Complaints have been rife this season concerning Newfoundland herring, and prices have varied from the floor to the ceiling. For instance, 1919 large winters are quoted in some quarters as high as $22 per barrel, emphasis being placed upon the superior quality of these goods, while other dealers are offering—or claim they are offering—for as low as $10, with no attempt to capitalize the "Q" in quality. After sifting all available information, however, it is probable that a fair, all-round price for winters is $14@16 per barrel for fish "as they run". While it is said that very much better prices are obtainable for "fancy" stocks, we would like to

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

While stocks of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring are moving freely, due to a tendency on the part of dealers to "get out from under" before the arrival of new goods on the market, the curtailment of the supply of Scotch herring on account of the longshoremen's strike has not affected prices materially. One large factor give it as his opinion that this is due largely to the fact that Scotch herring is arriving in large quantities via Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other ports which have not been affected by the strike. Along about the middle of December the new goods will be in the market, which explains the almost frantic efforts of large holders of old stocks to unload at almost any price. One large dealer advises that he has on hand over 10,000 packages, and that some of these goods, while not in the pink of condition, have been sold for as low as $11 in order to get them off his hands. The reason advanced by several New York factors for the inferior Newfoundland goods this year is that they were allowed to remain on the wharves in Newfoundland during the heat of the summer before being shipped. Prices remain on a level with last week's quotations. — N. Y. Fishing Gazette.

Just Folks

THE BEST LAND.
If I knew a better land on this glorious world of ours Where a man gets bigger money and is working shorter hours; If the Briton or the Frenchman had an easier life than mine, I'd pack my goods this minute and I'd sail across the brine. But I notice when an alien wants a land of hope and cheer And a future for his children, he comes out and settles here. Here's the glorious land of Freedom! Here's the milk and honey goal For the peasant out of Russia, for the long subjected Pole. It is here the sons of Italy and men of Austria turn For the comfort of their bodies and the wages they can earn. And with all that men complain of, and with all that goes amiss, There's no happier, better nation on the world's broad face than this. So I'm thinking when I listen to the wails of discontent, And some foreign disbeliever spreads his evil sentiment, That the breed of hate and envy that is sowing sin and shame In this glorious land of Freedom should go back from whence it came. And I hold it is the duty, rich or poor, of every man Who enjoys this country's bounty to be all American.

Household Notes.

Grape-fruit pie is a novelty. Stale rusks are very good roasted. Measure flour after a single sifting. Use sandpaper on a rusty kitchen stove. Heat can be bought in compressed tablets. Soups may be thickened with tapioca. Pies should be baked in a moderate oven. A cupful of anything means a half pint. Chop suey may be garnished with fried noodles. A quart of soup will serve four or five people. A settee beside the fire may serve as a wood-box. Asbestos is the only proper lining for dummies. Mildew on leather can be rubbed off with vaseline. Thoroughly chilled bacon will slice very evenly.

Ladies' Hats. Fall Styles

Just a very choice selection of Hats. The season's smartest models. No two alike. Small, snugly-smart hats for stormy, windy days and all-round wear. Beautiful models in Velour, Velvet and clipped Beaver for smart occasions. In short, Hats that are exclusive in style to suit all types. We have a fine assortment of Untrimmed Hats in very stylish shapes. See the "Hats that are different" in our Ladies' Department. SPECIAL! — A discount of 20 per cent. is allowed off the price of all Trimmed Hats.
