Some Elderly Beauties.

History is full of the accounts of the fascinations of women who were no longer young.

Thus, Helen of Troy was over forty when she perpetrated the most famous elopement on record, and as the siege of Troy lasted a decade she could not have been very juvenile when the ill-fortune of Paris restored her to her husband, who is reported to have received her with unquestioning love and gratitude.

Pericles wedded the courtesan Aspasia when she was 36, and yet she afterwards for thirty years or more yielded an undiminished reputation for beauty.

Cleopatra was past thirty when Antony fell under her spell, which never lessened until her death, nearly ten years after; and Livia was thirty-three when she won the heart of Augustus, over whom she maintained her ascendancy to the last.

Turning to more modern history, where it is possible to verify dates more accurately, we have the extraordinary Diane de Poitiers, who was thirty-six when Henry II. (then Duke of Orleans, and just half her age) became attached to her; and she was held as the first lady and most beautiful woman at court up to the period of the monarch's death and the accession to power of Catherine de Medici.

Anne of Austria was thirty-eight when she was described as the handsomest queen in Europe, and when Buckingham and Richelieu were her jealous admirers.

Ninon de L'Enclos, the most celebrated wit and beauty of her day, was the idol of three generations of the golden youth of France; she was seventy-two when the Abbe de Bernis fell in love with her. In the case of this lady a rare combination of culture, and personal attractions endowed their possessor seemingly with the gift of eternal youth.

Blanco Capello was thirty-eight when the Grand Duke Francisco of Florence fell captive to her charms, and made her his wife, although he was five years her junior.

Louis XIV. wedded Mme. de Maintenon when she was forty-three years of age.

Catherine II was thirty-three when she seized the empire of Russia, and captivated the dashing young General Orloff. Up to the time of her death (at sixty-seven), she seemed to have obtained the same bewitching powers, for the lamentations were heartfelt among all those who had ever known her personally.

Mlle. Mars, the celebrated French tragedienne, only attained the zenith of her beauty and power between forty and forty-five. At that period the loveliness of her hands and arms especially was celebrated throughout Europe.

The famous Mme. Recamier was thirty-eight when Barras was ousted from power, and she was without dispute, declared to be the most beautiful woman in Europe, which rank she held for fifteen years.

German Ex-Crown Prince's Memoirs.

Late in July the ex-Crown Prince wrote a letter to Captain Kurt Anker, formerly an intelligence officer in the Crown Prince's Army Group, in which he said that he had refused all invitations from newspapers to print his memoirs, as it was repugnant to him to assert his claim for justice too hastily. The letter continued as follows:

In the war I endeavored, according to my knowledge and ability, to do my duty. I tried to spare the blood of the German soldiers committed to my care where I could, and to make life better for them so far as lay in my extremely limited power. To-day most will disown me. I bear them no grudge for that; but thousands of my brave fellows, whose hands I have shaken, will in their hearts recognize the truth that I finally left the scene of my activities when my person might cause further confusion for our poor and severely tried Fatherland. Whether I acted rightly, who will to-day decide?

Events have taken their course, and we must now concentrate our thoughts on raising again our shattered German Nation and restoring to outward and inward health our Fatherland, which is bleeding from a thousand wounds. I personally am by no means in a state of deep despair or indifferent apathy. Under the entirely changed conditions, I shall build up a new life for myself and my family.

Queen Mary's Favorite Poet.

The Queen's near friends know that her favorite poet is Lord Byron, and that often when Her Majesty is busy with her needle she has an open volume of the poet's work by her side. The Queen is one of the few who can read and sew at the same time. She dislikes being read aloud to, and for this the ladies in waiting are devoutly thankful; for Queen Victoria's ladies had rather an unhappy time, sometimes being called upon to read to Her Majesty several hours a day—no small tax on the vocal chords, as some of them found.
