PLUCKY MRS. DUDLEY.

ING OF ROSSA.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 .- Mrs. Dudley, who shot R ssa yesterday, was arraigned at the Tombs to-day. She declined to plead and was remanded until the result of Rossa's injuries can be ascertained. She was represented by Counsellor A. C. Butts of Morrisiana, N.Y., who declared that he

I have determined to make my communication with the public through it. , There has been so much romance and sensation published already that people can go without any more. "Are you one of a band of avengers?" asked the reporter.

"Why," said the lady, arching her eyebrows, half smiling and biting her lip, "you are trying to get up the most sensational story of the lot. A band of avengers! Band of fiddlesticks! Why if this had taken place in London the papers would have printed twelve lines about it and that would have been an end, but here they must print columns." they must print columns."

'No; I did it alone, and knew I was going to do it." "Did you know Rossa personally before you met him after sending your first note?"
"I you't answer that."
"Are you used to handling pistols?"

"No, I never did it before in my life, had just bought a pistol and got the man I bought it from to show me how to put the things - the bullets - I don't know what

Throughout the interview the lady displayed no excitement.

To another reporter Mrs. Dudley said: "It may appear strange that I should have put myself forward as the avenger of English wrongs, but I had positive ideas of my own, and while all the world was talking about Rossa and dynamite and all that, not one was brave enough to come forward and put a stop to that one man, who was after as to the English people. I am sorry," she continued, "L appear in the light of being steh a bad shot, as I really can use the pistol dexterously. I did not mean to kill Rossa, only to frightem him If I meant to kill him outright I could have done so inside the storm door."

LONDON, Feb. 3 .- It is stated Mrs. Dudley is the illegitimate daughter of persons of rank. She at one time studied with a view of going on the stage. There are conflicting reports as to her having been married. During her confinement in an acylum she had frequent paroxysms, and was considered dangerous. Yobody conversing with her could believe her mad. here Mrs. Dudley stated she was doing well in New York, often getting $15 for im of a mock marriage to an English dergyman who was already married. She was subject to moods of intense love and hate. Letters written by her indicate that man's mission in Ireland was to ingratiate hereelt with the leading men there and try to lead them into talking about dynamite and dynamiters.

All sorts of games were put up on her. As a climax it was determined to introduce her to a secret meeting of dynamiters and then unmask her. She got wind of this and suddenly disappeared. Nothing further was heard of her until December, when it was ascertained she had been sent to this country to do the same work she had undertaken in Dublin. Work she had undertaken in Dudley feel positive Mrs. Ryder and Mrs. Dudley are the same. I hope my surplicion that she is an English spy is not true, for it will appeal to the brutalities of both nations. If so the English will lose more than the Irish, for they have more to lose. An appeal to a retaliatory system between the two countries seems horrible to me but as an Irishman I do not fear it. I profoundly hope it may not continue."

RASCALITIES OF THE TURF. Justice Rose on the Loudon-Smith Case

The case of Loudon v. Smith was continued yesterday at the civil assizes, the jury bringing in a verdict in favor of defendant shortly after 6 o'clock. For the defence the defendant, J. C. Smith, testified that what first roused his suspicions as to Loudon's honesty was the receipt of a letter from Chicago dated June 22 in which Loudon said he (Smith) should not be surprised if Moulsey should win as she was the best horse in the field except and an attack on capitalists. Sensational Witness had no conversation with Loudon when they were coming home from Chicago about returning him the money he had put into the horses. Witness bad not been tained which shows that in Pittsburg there very successful with his stable and had not made any money from winnings above the expenses. He had sunk altogether about $8000 in the horses and expressed his willingness to sell out for one-quarter of that. The object in buying Lloyd Daly was to get one that could beat Disturbance. He then produced the check given to Loudon for $2000 and $1000 and others for expenses of various kinds. He also affirmed that he would not have made up the balance of the purchase money of Daly if Loudon had not shown him a receipt for $500, which he said he had paid Phelan on $500, which he said he had paid Phelan on the said he had paid Phelan on $500.

Other witnesses having been examined, Mr. Osler addressed the jury on behalf of defendant. His address was in a great measure an attack on Loudon's character.

When the house rose this afternoon Mr. Blake and Sir Hector Langevin had ten minutes of friendly chat and it is pretty certain that the topic was Sir Charles Tupper. He was followed by Mr. Lount, who made an eloquent address on behalf of plaintiff. His lordship then proceeded to charge the jury. He said it was anything but asant for him to sit and hear such reve-ions as had been brought out in that ase. If the turf was managed by blackcase. If the turf was managed by black-legs and scallawags then young men of re-spectability had better keep away from it. Was it the intention of defendant to advance

Justice Rose requested the jury to state fully in their verdict what the nature of the agreemant was as they understood it. The jury, after two hours' deliberation, brought in substantially the following verdict: That the agreement was that there was to be a co-partnership up to Dec. 31, 1883, but that then the agle ownership passed to defendant. That whatever money plaintiff had advanced for the purchase of the horses was to be repaid out of the winnings after expenses had been paid, and that defendant was not liable for any moneys that had been paid out for plant oy plaintiff.

As both plaintiff and defendant admitte that the winnings were fully covered by the expenses, the verdict was of course in favor of defendant. Mr. Lount, however, raised the point that the winnings at Sara-toga should be taken into account, and asked his lordship to have the defendant produce a statement of his earnings and expenses at the races there. His lordship said he would consider the matter, but from the evidence he thought such a state-ment if produced could be of no possible
