FOURTEENTH YEAR

CARTER HARRISON KILLED.

Chicago's Mayor Shot by An Assassin.

THE MURDERER AN EX-POLICEMAN.

Called to the Door and Pistoled to Death.

The Assassin a Crank, Who Claims That the Mayor Did Not Keep His Word to Him—Three Shots Were Fired, One of Which Pierced Harrison's Heart—The Murderer Gives Himself Up and Tells of the Shooting—Intense Excitement—Frenzied in Chicago Over the Deadly Crime.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Another crazy crank has done his deadly work, and Carter Harrison, five times Mayor of Chicago and one of the best known men in the west, has died in his home, 281 South Ashland-boulevard. Three bullets entered his body, two of them making wounds sufficient to cause death. The door was opened by a servant, Patrick Frendegast, a paper carrier and an ex-member of the Chicago Police force, who declared that Mayor Harrison had promised to make him corporation counsel and he had not kept his word. This, he said, was his only reason for committing the crime. The only person in the house at the time besides Mr. Harrison was his son, William Frederick Harrison, 23 years of age, and the servant, shortly before 8 o'clock the door bell rang, and when Mary Hansen, the domestic, opened the door she was confronted by a man about 5 feet 5 inches in height, smooth shaven, his face clean cut, bright eyes, with a pair of dark eyes.

"Mr. Harrison," asked the man in a quiet, pleasant voice.

"Yes, sir," responded the girl, as she threw the door wider open to permit his entrance.

"I would like to see him, please," said the man as he walked toward the back end of the hall. Mr. Harrison was in the dining room, which opens into the rear end of the hall. Hearing the man ask for him he rose and, stepping into the hall, walked toward Frendegast, who by the time he came to the sight of Mr. Harrison had advanced about 10 feet from the doorway.

Without saying a word, Frendegast drew his revolver and, coming forward, he pulled the trigger but three times, and every bullet hit the mark. One ball shattered Mr. Harrison's left hand, another passed into the right side of the abdomen, making a wound that would have been mortal in a few days; the third bullet entered the chest, slightly above the heart. The bullet was the immediate cause of death.

As soon as Frendegast saw that the victim was dead, he fled rapidly toward the dining room. He walked through the door, across the dining room, making a butler's pantry opening off the room, where, weakened by loss of blood, he fell to the floor.

Frendegast did not follow up his flight to make any attempt to escape, but he hid his hand in his pocket with the same deliberation that had marked all of his actions and started toward the door. Just as he was passing through the doorway he saw the assassin, who, the Mayor's son, came tearing down the stairs from the upper portion of the house, just as Miss Anna Howard, who was in the rear end of the hall. The cries of Harry Hansen directed the assassin toward the door. He had a revolver of his own and he fired a bullet into the air. The bullet leveled his weapon and sent a bullet after the disappearing criminal.

"That man Frendegast is crazy," said Corporation Counsel Kraus. "I know him and I know his father, and I know that he is a madman. I would not be surprised if he called as my office twice and told me that he was going to kill me. I would not be surprised if he called as my office twice and told me that he was going to kill me. ward Desplaine-street Station, with the object of giving himself up.

"I would have been here sooner," he said, "if I had not been so busy."

At the station where he gave himself up, he just four blocks over one mile from the Harrison residence he scarcely had time to observe than he said:

"The murderer is in secret custody, the place of his detention being known only to the police. There is no longer any fear of lynching, but the higher officials of the Police Department think it best to be on the safe side, and at 7 o'clock this morning Frendegast was removed quietly from Central Station, where he was confined, to one of the outlying police stations."

History of the shooting retold and statements of physicians called the attention of the coroner's jury at the Harrison residence for an hour this morning. Excepting a technical description of the wounds little was added to the information already at the disposal of the officers of the law. The verdict recommended that Frendegast be held for murder until discharged by process of law.

FOR IDENTIFYING CRIMINALS.

SOME BETTER SYSTEM NEEDED IN CANADA.

The Case of Pat Shearin, the Port-Duloune Burglar, Shows that the Present System of Identifying Criminals is Inadequate.

THE PRESENT SYSTEM.

When a criminal is brought before a court, the first thing that is done is to identify him. This is done by comparing his face with the photographs of the criminals who are in the prison.

BLEW THE STOVE THRO' THE ROOF.

Gas From a New Well Filled the House and Exploded—New Escape of an Inmate.

CHATHAM, Ont., Oct. 23.—David Wilcox, whose farm is down the River Thames seven miles from Chatham, had a gas explosion with natural gas Friday. Men were engaged in sinking a well on the premises. There was no suspicion that natural gas existed on the place. After reaching a depth of about 60 feet a flow of gas was developed unknown to the diggers. The vapor quickly found its way to the farm house and filled every room.
