LEFT THE WEST FOR THE EAST.

F. G. Scott, Northwood, N. H. The west had been my home from boyhood, but I had always wanted to visit historic New England, and the opportunity came. Boston and vicinity proved interesting. Then back into Massachusetts, up through Vermont and New Hampshire I went. It was a revelation. Here were agricultural possibilities dormant, awaiting the industrious modern farmer and stock raiser. I resolved to become a Yankee at once.

Observation and a study of causes seemed to make it all plain to me. Horace Greely said, "Go west, young man." The young men went. They not only went west, but to the cities. Any place that offered glittering inducements caught the farm boys of New England. The great trans-continental railroads received immense grants of land from the government as a bonus for the construction of their lines. Buyers for these lands were next in order. Settlers along the various roads were also necessary to furnish them business in traffic. They came those lurid advertisements portraying in glowing colors the golden opportunities in the west. Numerous land companies also gave impetus to the movement by distributing broad-cast exaggerated reports and literature. Ridiculously low fares to the new eldorados were offered and the rush was on in earnest. Thousands migrated. To be sure, there were millions of acres of fertile prairie lands to be had almost for the asking, and perhaps the settler was in a measure justified.

For years this western movement has been in progress. First, it was the pick of these lands at $1.25 an acre. In a decade it was $10, then $20. And now what? Those $1.25 lands are today selling for $100 to $200 per acre, and the day of good, cheap farms in the west is past.

In the early day all western products had necessarily to seek a market in the east, and the New England farmer found it difficult to compete in the production of cereals and meats. But conditions have changed. The center of population is gradually travelling toward the Rockies. With each succeeding year the now populous west consumes more and more of her farm products, which means that competition in Boston and New York is decreasing. Then, too, the virgin fertility of the soil west is being exhausted. In some sections commercial fertilizer is already a necessity. This, of course, increases cost of production there, and so to that extent permits the producing New England farmer to under this new order of things, farming and stock raising with him should now be profitable.

Nowhere in the United States can the home seeker buy so much for his money as here in New England. In the town of Northwood, and it is only one of many, well improved farms can be had at less than value. Timber and wood thrown in for good measure. But they will advance in price. In fact, they have already done so in localities whose recently organized boards of trade and improvement desire this new order of things, farming and stock raising with him should now be profitable.

Many of them will double in value in the next ten years. They are going to be in demand. These splendid, dignified old homesteads will be sought after by the western farmer who wishes to escape cyclones, droughts, the everlasting slavery of irrigation, manure, isolation, and the clutter of the stockyards and elevator combines. Here he may possibly have to do things on a smaller scale, but more of the dollars he actually produces will reach his pockets. And, too, he should need fewer dollars.

At the same time, he and his family will be living in the broadest sense of the word. An abundance of fruit, fine water, good roads, attractive lakes and streams, splendid schools, railroad facilities and markets generally good, for neighbors, a refined and hospitable people.

Yes, the conditions of forty years ago have reversed. Then it was go west, buy cheap lands, endure hardships, and finally build a home. Now it is go east, buy cheap, well improved farms with good buildings, in the midst of modern civilization. The exodus to New England is just starting. Watch it grow.

BAD BURN QUICKLY HEALED.

Counterfeit Money

Ottawa, July 9.—In connection with the arrest of Charles Burke, for counterfeiting, Colonel Sherwood, commissioner of the Dominion Police, stated that off and on for the last two years the detectives of the Dominion Police had been engaged in ferreting out the men who were passing the spurious money.

The counterfeiting was not steady, being done by fits and starts. The detectives were puzzled for a time, as to where the plant was situated, but an arrest in Montreal gave by local men the desired clue. Burke was watched for some time, and then arrested at his home. A search of the house revealed a complete plant for the making of $5 bills of the Montreal, Dominion and Traders Banks.

Detective James Partinon, who made the capture, resides at 76 College Avenue. He has been on the force for upwards of twenty years, and is one of its cleverest men.

Trade with Australia

The trade and commerce department has received reports from J. S. Larke, Canada's trade agent in Sydney, and H. H. Ross, agent at Melbourne. Mr. Larke says that trade in New Zealand is prosperous. In New South Wales and Australia generally the harvest will not be an average one. The early part of the year was too dry. The prospects for developing the leather trade are good. A firm to secure the trade must do its own business. The population of New Zealand increased from 714,162 in 1906 to 908,226 in 1906.

Mr. Ross gives figures to show that Canadian trade with Australia is increasing. In 1906 Canada exported $293,751, an increase of $72,179 over 1905. The imports to Canada from Australia were $72,688, an increase of $29,400.

THE DOCTOR AWAY FROM HOME WHEN MOST NEEDED.

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape buy it now; it may save life. For much pain and suffering and all risk, sale by W. A. WARREN, Pharm. B.

THE DIFFERENCE.

"Jane," said the good mistress, "I'm very pleased with you; you do the house a great credit." "Thank you, mum," said Jane; "I always do my best, and I'm glad you can't go a fault to find with me." "I don't say that, Jane; the only thing I find to say against you is that your washing bill is far too extravagant. Last week you sent six blouses to the wash. Why, Jane, my own daughter never sends more than two!" "Ah! that may be, mum," replied Jane, "but I 'ave to! Your daughter's sweetheart is a bank clerk, while my young man is a chimney sweep. It makes a difference, mum."

The Miners Union Trial

The miners' trial at Boise, Idaho, has developed some very conflicting testimony. The direct testimony of the prosecution rests chiefly upon the story of Harry Orchard, the man who really committed the murder of ex-Gov. Stuenkel, for which Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the western federation of miners, is on trial as an accomplice. As we have before reported, Orchard's story was an alleged confession of many times in which he involved the highest officials of the western federation of miners. He claimed that they employed him and other men willing to do such work to destroy property and kill off such people as the unions wished to have disposed of.

The gist of the testimony introduced by the defense has been a general denial of Orchard's story. A good many witnesses, including some prominently mentioned by Orchard, have sworn that he lied and that either he could not have committed crimes that he claimed to have committed or that they were accomplished for the mine owners' association as a part of the latter's alleged plot to make trouble for the unions. Much testimony has been introduced tending to prove the innocence of Haywood and his accused associates.

Orchard told a strong story and was not broken up by cross-examination. The prosecution was weak in its attempt to connect Haywood, the mine owners' association and the murder. The defense has devoted considerable time to showing the alleged treachery of detectives who had exposed the secrets of the unions.
