

for wearing, on the neck, ribbon. Numbers 527, 506, and 505 are pieces somewhat deeper than those just referred to. They are slanting at the lower edge, after a late mode.

BATTENBERG STOCK COLLAR, LOTUS DESIGN,
No. 510.
Price of pattern, 15 cents.

another color.

Especial attention is called to the refreshing fact that the patterns of stock collars displayed here actually fit women's throats. Not only are the designs agreeable to the eye and easily wrought, but the models are curved as cunningly as the collars made by famous dressmakers.

This excellence in cut is the result, too, of an intelligent demand from women who buy lace patterns, for something better than the shapeless common designs.

The lotus has offered a graceful suggestion to our artist. Narrow in front, that the chin may not crush the delicate lace, it widens to come up closely under the ears, and high at the back as fashion requires. The patterns measure fifteen inches in length. Allowance is made for shrinkage in working—it varies with woman and woman—for possible change when cleansing, and for difference in neck sizes. The petals of the flowers overlap and make the joint neat.

BATTENBERG STOCK COLLAR, WATER LILY
DESIGN No. 511.
Price of Pattern, 5 cents.

distinguished appearance to one's costume. Nos. 510 and 512 are similar, though the use in one case of Battenberg and in the other of Honiton braid, gives results quite unlike.

The needs of women with a shorter neck have been considered in making the lace stock of water lily design. Especially narrow and comfortable at the front and sides, the back of the collar is high and perky, just as are the collars of women with more swanlike throats. No. 511.

There are two ways of managing the high backs of these lace stocks. One is
B. & A. SILK IN HOLDERS SAVES TIME AND ANNOYANCE.

HONITON STOCK COLLAR, LOTUS DESIGN,
No. 512.
Price of pattern, 15 cents.

At the back of a lace stock, as elsewhere in woman's dress, ornamental pins help wonderfully in giving a finished and

BATTENBERG COLLAR, CONVOLVULUS DESIGN,
No. 513.
Price of pattern, 15 cents.