

It is pleasant to feel that no matter where we go, we are dressed
"Just Right."

Lounge Suits—

The styles shown for Spring and Summer, Nineteen-thirteen, can truthfully be said to be the most rational and desirable that have been presented. The old style exaggerated shoulder with its layers of padding is a thing of the past. Two and three button soft roll coats predominate. Peg-top trousers will be correct for outing wear only. The range of patterns and weaves is very extensive and comprises besides the usual lines of staple Blues and Greys, some very new designs and novel effects. The fancy materials have brought a bewildering mixture of colors. Vivid colors have been used, but the tones chosen blend so well that the result is not garish. The plain Red-Browns that have been much used in Europe of late are here, and wonderful combinations of color on Wood Browns.

Shirts—

Comparatively little change is noticeable. Russian Cord, Mercerized Madras, Pereales and Scotch and English fabrics in Jacquard patterns will vie with each other in popularity. A big call for the White Shirt with narrow pleated bosom is anticipated. This shirt and the Bat-wing tie go well together.

Neckwear—

When we try to describe the multifarious displays in every conceivable color combination, and in every conceivable pattern, we feel like the citizen of Arizona, who was conducted to his last resting place with a hempen tie around his neck. Crutchetted silken four-in-hands in contrasting stripes, some gaudy and others of neat, refined appearance, still occupy the top rung of the ladder of popular opinion. Bat-wing ties will be very much in evidence. We do not refer to the ready-made-up wings, but the short tie about 1½ inches wide in plain black and dark colors, some with narrow stripes, which the wearer slips under his collar and ties to suit his own taste.

Altadena-Continued

Altadena has every natural advantage as a Residential District, being high ground free from rock with gentle grassy slope to the road and having the British Columbia Electric Station within three minutes' walk. One ten-roomed house has already been designed by Mr. H. Bryant-Newbold for Mr. Ernest Kennedy and work has been commenced. There are several others in contemplation. A School and two Churches are within easy walking distance.

With the Saanich suburban cars running in a few weeks' time, this will prove a most attractive place for those looking for the benefits of the City combined with those of the Country, as there are few more beautiful places around Victoria.
