

St. Andrew's and many family graveyards keep in memory those who came in early years, sometimes through hardships to an almost wilderness.

Eleven markers have been placed by the Historical Society at many of the places mentioned, the three points not spoken of being the site of Government House 1812, Indian Council House and Brown's Point, where Brock is said to have called out "Push on York Volunteers," 13th October, 1812.
