SERMONS OBSERVED WITH REVERENCE

Year's, Easter is marked everywhere by the presentation of gifts, and many of these take the form of the egg, the symbol of life and resurrection. Toronto's foreign citizens who are of the Catholic religion, and those who are of the Greek Church, salute each other with kisses when they meet in Easter Day, eat eggs profusely, also cakes and confections molded in the shapes of eggs, also they drink wine from huge Easter eggs of glass and china, they visit each other's houses freely and are abundantly entertained. There is a truce in all feuds and quarrels, and old enemies meet and converse amicably on the day. Usually among the men the outward and visible symbol of Easter takes the form of a new and gorgeous necktie and women wear new hats ornamented with bright ribbons. When they meet they say to each other in greeting: "On this day Christ rose." In the Christian churches yesterday the worshippers, arrayed in new attire, with the air of spring in their hearts, listened to the special Easter music and in two or three churches, to Easter cantatas. Most of the sermons were filled with Easter thoughts.

Easter Services.

In the Metropolitan Church Easter anthems and selections from the oratorio "Elijah" were sung by the choir. Rev. W. L. Armstrong preached appropriate sermons. The magnificent cantata "Moses" by the choir, which attracted a large congregation to the Trinity Methodist Church, at the Broadway Baptist Church an Easter cantata, "Death in the Spring" was given. At the College Street Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. Ferguson of British Columbia preached an Easter sermon entitled "God Doing Our Things" at the morning. At the evening service, Rev. H. R. Pickup delivered a special sermon which he called "Easter Lilies."

At the Western Congregational, the newly reorganized choir were surprised for the first time. A churchful of Easter worshippers listened to the fine music. The Anglican churches in the city were decorated with white lilies and Easter blossoms. The beautiful service of the English Church, which music forms the greater part, was conducted by the choirman in charge.

At St. Michael's Cathedral Archbishop McNeil offered pontifical mass and extended Easter greetings to all men of good heart. His grace, regarding the generally high color scheme of resurrection, said in part: "In consequence of our faith in the crowning proof of Christ's divinity, we are assured of a certain life beyond the grave. We rejoice with Him on this triumphant Easter day and our joy is like to those who board a ship in momentary danger of engulfment, see the rescue vessel approaching. Their fear has been turned into great joy.

The consideration of the resurrection produces fear and joy. Fear is the thought of death, joy in the fact that our Saviour's resurrection is a pledge of our own. Humanity walking in a continuous procession to the grave, the narrow gate to the other life, is filled with fear and uncertainty; the great procession views the number constantly increasing of those of whom return to tell what lies beyond. But one member of this procession passed through this narrow strait in victory. He entered with the peace be to you on His lips and the marks of the crown and nails on His head and hands. For 40 days He gave us the words which strengthened the faith in His young church. This "divine society," too, has had its periods of depression and activity, and its grace thinks it is one of its most vigorous epochs. In fact, he said, one can see it: just as one standing on the shore can see the waves before it is felt. The little ripple and then the wave indicates its coming. So, today a wave of infidelity is sweeping over the church. We cannot see it advancing. We know its presence by the oft repeated expressions, "I have no religion." This wave will wipe out many a landmark. But the Catholic Church, with its inherent vitality, will remain to preach "Christ crucified, the resurrection of the body and life everlasting."

The archbishop asked what the world would be without this religious hope.

The certainty of this hope is the foundation of the joy which we experience on this Easter day. It gives us the greatest pleasure to join with our best friend in His day of triumph, and I wish you the joys and blessings of Easter tide," he said.

Social Problems.

Yesterday afternoon at the Metropolitan Church, Mr. A. Wesley Martin addressed the society service organization of the church at the last meeting of its second season. His subject was "Social Problems of the Twentieth Century." He spoke of the "Church." It was a very clear and definite presentation of the various problems confronting society and demanding the attention of the Chris-

WONDERFUL BOY ACTOR SPENDS HIS SPARE TIME IN Y. M. C. A.

Burford Hampden, Who Plays Tytyl in "The Blue Bird," Likes to Swim and Sleep Almost as Well as He Likes Being on the Stage.

BURFORD HAMPDEN.

The English boy who plays the role of Tytyl in "The Blue Bird." He will return to the Royal Alexandra next week, where he is a great favorite.

Master Burford Hampden, who has endeared himself to the theatregoers, as well as to the young and old, by his delightful acting in "The Blue Bird," next week in the Royal Alexandra next week in a real boy. When you are talking with him, you receive the impression that he would rather be playing on the back lot with other boys than on the stage with grownups. He has none of the actor's vanity.

An interviewer in a neighboring city intercepted Burford the other day as he was hurrying away from his hotel with a very suspicious-looking package under his arm, said package appearing to contain a bathing suit and a pair of "sneakers" or athletic shoes. "I have a very important date," said the boy actor. "However, let's go back. I suppose I can give you a few minutes."

Presently the boy confided to "his new-found friend that the 'date' was an appointment at the Young Men's Christian Association.

"You see," he explained, "I have an international membership card that admits me to any Y.M.C.A. gymnasium in the world. Up in the 'gym' they don't know I'm an actor. It's great. Nobody asks me to recite a piece, and when we box, they buff me as hard as anybody else. I was cheating a bit today, trying to get up there ahead of the usual time, when you stopped me."

"What is your favorite sport?"

"Swimming and sleeping. The finest time I ever had in my life was at Monte Carlo last summer. The water's great there. Every day I slept fourteen hours, and when I was awake, I was in the sea, or at least in a boat every day now. I'm a pretty busy little fellow, if you could sleep as long everything. You see there are three hours of 'day' three hours for meals, and an hour for my violin lesson which is a lot of fun. Then, of course, there's a performance of Tytyl every evening and two on matinee days. I don't get up until eleven, you see it keeps me hustling."

"How long did it take you to learn the part of Tytyl?"

"Three weeks. I may not look it, but I'm an actor of experience. I played Puck in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' for Sir Herbert Tree, and before that I played the Herald in 'Pinks and the Fairies.' But the proudest moment in my life was when I had but a line or two to say. It was at a special performance for King George in London.

"They were giving Sheridan's 'The Critic,' because of the many parts, afforded an opportunity for all the great actors of London to speak at least a line. It was funny to hear such great men merely passing the time of day with another character and then walking off the stage, never to appear again.

"Well, there was one part none of these distinguished actors could take. It was the little Black Page. 'They were too big for it. Imagine how I felt when the director told me that Burford Hampden should have it. I didn't have much to say, but I said it, and it was more than several veteran actors had. Why, I just barely commented to speak to father and mother when I got home. As you say in America, 'Some class, eh?'"

"Have you studied 'The Blue Bird' symbolism?" asked the interviewer, it is to be feared, somewhat waggishly. "There isn't any," replied Burford, in matter-of-fact tones. "It is just a fairy story. Why, in Boston, Mass., he added, 'all those highbrows out in front were like so many Pages. They discovered a symbol in 'his story' a symbol in that, until their symbols clashed and nobody knew what they were talking about. I don't believe Maeterlinck was writing in symbols; but if he was, I don't believe he knew

DUCAL PARTY ON WAY TO ENGLAND

Connaughts Given Warm Greeting at Halifax—Sailed in Early Morning.

HALIFAX, March 23.—(Can. Press.)—Brilliant military uniforms mingled with the more sombre tints of civilian attire at the ship's side tonight at 8.30 o'clock, when the royal train of the C.P.R. pulled into the terminal pier with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia aboard. The building was gay with hunting and a carpeted gangway led from the train to the saloon deck of the steamer. The grade of this was made as easy as possible so as not to tax the strength of the duchess, who had stood the journey well, but had nevertheless a slightly wearied look.

Among those in the company to greet the royal party were Governor MacGregor, Col. Rutherford, the new commanding officer of the Maritime Provinces, and D. Pottinger of the government railways management board. Escorting the party from Ottawa was W. R. Baker, assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who, with Col. Lowther, military secretary to the duke, returned to Ottawa tonight.

Entering the steamer the duchess found a handsome basket of flowers sent by the wives of members of the Borden cabinet at Ottawa, and there was also a bouquet from Governor MacGregor.

The royal party dined together on the Empress at 9 o'clock with W. R. Baker, Col. Lowther and Captain Bulkeley. The steamer sailed at 3 o'clock in the morning.

KING CONSTANTINE AT SALONIKI

SALONIKI, March 23.—(Can. Press.)—King Constantine arrived here today and was acclaimed by the populace. The foreign warships fired a salute of 21 guns. The king showed great grief and the meeting between him and Dowager Queen Olga in the death chamber was most affecting, both bursting into tears.

The body of the late King George will lie in state tomorrow and residents of Saloniki will be allowed to pass before the coffin.

GAY COLORS SEEN ON FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK, Mar. 23.—(Can. Press.)—Fifth avenue's annual Easter dress parade was favored today by bright sunshine, but with a decided nip in the brisk wind that blew. In the afternoon hours the fashionable throngs were thronged as of olden before, but the display of the season's styles was perhaps somewhat less effective than some times because of the frequent resort to furs and wraps of various sorts in the chilly air. Extremes in design were rare in the gowns worn, the striking note of the exhibit being the generally high color scheme. Bright hues were the rule rather than the exception, in both clothing and head covering of the feminine element.

Churches all over the city were well filled at the morning services with elaborate musical programs the rule. The throngs were so great at St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth avenue and the new Cathedral of St. John the Divine uptown that thousands were unable to gain admission.

Wash your dishes with GOLD DUST

Ordinary dish-water only cleans the surface. Put a dash of Gold Dust into the water and it will go to the bottom of things, drive out every bit of dirt, every germ, every hidden particle. Gold Dust cleanses as well as cleans.

We promise you this if you use Gold Dust: Your dishes will be sweeter and cleaner than ever before and you will save at least half the time ordinarily consumed in washing them.

Gold Dust does better work than soap or any other dish-washing product—and saves half the time.

NEARING THE END OF THE FREE BREAKFAST SEASON.

They came, they ate and went away satisfied, as they had done for 12 Sundays this winter. The Sunday morning free breakfasts given every week at the Yonge street mission are drawing to a close, just one more to be held this year. There was a turnout of 267 men yesterday morning, and they showed their musical ability as usual by the bright way in which they sang. An earnest address was given by Rev. C. H. Schutt of Central Baptist Church. The last breakfast of the season will be given next Sunday morning.
