PUBLIC MAIN SUPPORT OF NEW YORK MARKET

J. S. Bache & Co. say in their weekly market letter: The conclusion to be reached from the survey of the action of the market for the last two weeks is that public buying power, which has been the source of the rise for some months, has not yet exhausted itself. The fact that the public is now the main support of the market is shown by the very large increase in loans. It is, of course, a fact that, as these markin loans increase and increase in loans. It is, of course, a fact that, as these margin loans increase and become widespread, the staying quality becomes weaker.

Nevertheless, the comparatively small disturbance caused by the break earlier in the week shows that the public's money is still in supply for fuel, and that the fires may be kept burning until it becomes evident that future prosperity has been overdiscounted.
