TELLS OF LIFE IN ENGLAND

Old London Soon To Be Lighted Again Because of the Absence of Zepps.

"Over in England there are signs up in railway carriages and other public places warming against talking about military and naval matters. Every precaution is taken to prevent any information to get out that the enemy might use to advantage. That is one reason why, coming back from England, we feel we must be so careful what we say." The foregoing statement was made today by Nursing Sister J. I. Martin of the C. A. M. C., who is in the city on a few days' furlough, the first since going overseas fifteen months ago with the Ontario Military Hospital unit which mobilized at Toronto. For the past two months she has been on duty on a hospital ship plying between England and Halifax, and this is the second furlough in Canada.

"What do the people of England think about the duration of the war now?"

"So far as the English women taking the places of men is concerned, they seem to enjoy the work. They look healthy and robust, even driving the big express wagons and doing all kinds of heavy work. But sometimes it has see qed pathetic to me to see slender girls struggling with trunks and heavy luggage at the stations. I don't know how they stand it. But they all seem cheerful, The wounded men are wonderful, and so are girls and women who have released their men to fight."

Miss Martin is especially proud of the Ontario Government hospital at Orpington, where Dr. Hadley Williams of this city is chief surgeon and where she herself was attached to the staff for eleven months.

"It is magnificent," she says; "considered the best-equipped, not only in Great Britain, but on the continent. A large extension is being made which gives a total capacity of 2,078 beds."

Miss M. McIntosh and Miss Hanna of this city went over to England in the same unit as Miss Martin.

Nursing Sister Martin is an English girl, and it was a case of going home for her to return to Great Britain, Nevertheless she says; "Canada looks good enough for me, and I wouldn't want anything better than London, even the street cars."

Casualty reports today place the name of Gunner Norman Chivas, 12th Battery, on the list of killed in action, the second of his family to die in the present war. His brother Edwin was killed more than two years ago while serving with the 48th Highlanders of Toronto. Another brother, William, has been in France since the beginning of the war with the D. A. C., while a fourth brother, Charles, who went overseas as a baker, returned only a month ago.

Pte. Norman Chivas, who was reported killed today, was a member of the 12th Battery while it was still a part of the militia. He enlisted for overseas service immediately on the outbreak of the war.
