"The Day of Wrath," by Louis Tracy

IN his latest novel Mr. Tracy has written one of his most readable stories. It is a romance of the great war. The first sentence plunges the reader into plot and danger. An English officer, dressed as a civilian, is appealed to by an English girl, in the Friedrich-Strasse station on the night of the 3rd of August, 1914. She must leave Berlin. They succeed in leaving that city, and through all the rest of the story they continually escape from their enemies. The novel reader may confidently expect to enjoy action is quick and thrilling throughout, but Mr. Tracy is at his best when he brings on the incredible squad of British soldiers who have lost their regiment and are marching at night towards Holland and the coast. Yet we know that such squads actually did find their way back to England when they were cut off by the heroic retreat to Mons. Mr. Tracy has written a good story of the war. (Price, $1.25.)

CLAIMS LIBERALS HAVE TWO LEADERS

Hon. I. B. Lucas Joins Rowell and Dewart in Speech at Creemore.

THE BILINGUAL ISSUE

Attorney-General Says All French Representatives Are Liberals.

By a Staff Reporter. Creemore, Jan. 8.—The Liberal party is double-headed, said Hon. I. B. Lucas, addressing a large and sympathetic audience here tonight. Hartley Dewart is the hot-air artist and Newton Wesley Rowell the solemn exponent, said Mr. Lucas, who challenged Rowell to say that he had consented to the nomination of Dewart, or that he approved a contest in a riding made vacant by death during the war. Dewart was aspiring to take or share the Liberal leadership. He and Chas. M. Bowman had forced Rowell to get in the procession and aid the Liberal candidate in West Simcoe. Rowell had complained because Mr. Hearst had not appointed a farmer as minister of agriculture, but if the government had done so, the Liberals would have done their best to defeat him, said Mr. Lucas. He challenged Rowell to come out and declare that if a farmer were appointed the Liberals would not oppose him.

policy with regard to bilingualism. To his mind English and no other language should be taught in the schools of this province. Colonel J. A. Currie, M.P., trained his guns upon C. M. Bowman, M.L.A., and the latter's charge contained the Lewis machine guns purchased by the provincial government in the United States and forwarded to Britain. Mr. Bowman had asked why these guns had not gone on to France with the Canadian troops. Colonel Currie said the explanation was that some minor parts of the machine were not standardized. This was the sole cause of the delay. These parts were supplied in England. Colonel Currie said there were indications of withstanding Liberal denials and pro- tests, that, Toronto hotel and liquor interests were assisting Mr. Rowell's campaign, and Mr. Scott's candidature in West Hotelkeepers' Association had been in the constituency. Mr. Allen claimed that he was in the riding on business in connection with some property. Well, said Currie, "so far we have been unable to find any of his property or his business in the constituency."

The attorney-general opened by stating that both candidates were men of high stamp, either of whom would make a creditable representative and he approved a contest in a riding made vacant by death during the war. Dewart was aspiring to take or share the Liberal leadership. He and Chas. M. Bowman had forced Rowell to get in the procession and aid the Liberal candidate in West Simcoe. Rowell had complained because Mr. Hearst had not appointed a farmer as minister of agriculture, but if the government had done so, the Liberals would have done their best to defeat him, said Mr. Lucas. He challenged Rowell to come out and declare that if a farmer were appointed the Liberals would not oppose him.

ference what a typical riding like West Simcoe thinks of public questions." The paramount issue for the electors to determine was whether the Liberal government was travelling in the right direction, whether they were in the main right. "The Liberal is a double-headed party," said Mr. Lucas. "Officially Mr. Rowell is the head of the party but those who are a little more closely in touch with the party know that Mr. Hartley Dewart is at least aspiring to the leadership. If he does not want actually to oust Mr. Rowell, he appeals to a different kind of vote in the province. Mr. Rowell laid down the principle that if a riding became vacant by death during the war, the Liberal party would not be particularly inclined to put up a candidate to contest the riding. In North Perth the Conservative member resigned. Mr. Bowman said that if the constituency had become vacant by death there would have been no opposition by the Liberals in North Perth, but if the riding were opened up by resignation then they were at liberty to fight, and they did fight and they won, and you know why they won. In Southwest Toronto, Hon. J. J. Fay died, and Mr. Bowman said, 'Mr. Rowell left for England. I will apologize if Mr. Rowell will say in the newspapers tomorrow that Hartley Dewart was nominated with his consent and approval. I will put it up to Mr. Rowell. I do not think Rowell wanted him. But nothing succeeds like success. Mr. Dewart was dead in the riding. Let us go up into West Simcoe and if we win we are the heroes, and Rowell gets into the procession. I want to ask Mr. Rowell does he think the Liberal party ought to contest a constituency if during the war, it is opened up by death? I want his answer in the press tomorrow, if he wants to give it.' It was pathetic, declared Mr. Lucas, to hear Hartley Dewart and Newton Wesley Rowell mourning over the hydro. The Hearst government stood behind Sir Adam Beck and the hydro, while Mr. Lucas declared, in years past, Messrs. Rowell and Dewart had supported the men who tried to hand over the waterpowers to the corporations. "The only reason that Rowell and Dewart are supporting hydro," said Mr. Lucas, "is because they want the hydro to support them." Mr. Rowell proceeded Mr. Lucas had endeavored to intercept Sir Adam Beck into the West Simcoe election by calling for a letter from Sir Adam Beck. It was improper to drag Sir Adam Beck and hydro into the political arena. Let Mr. Rowell get a letter from Sir Adam Beck stating where he had any complaint against the Conservative party. As for Mr. Rowell's declaration denying that the hydro interests were behind his candidate and his campaign, Mr. Lucas stated the Liberal party's motto seems to be, "Let your light shine in the eyes of people that they can't see what is going on behind." Newton Wesley Rowell is the light, and Hartley Dewart and Charley Bowman are the boys behind.

crossed the Russian second line on the canal between Fokshani and Yarets, and advanced along the Fokshani-Bolotesti road. Fokshani was entered this morning. The enemy from the captured fortifications, as well as three cannon and several machine guns.

The Bulgarians in an official communication say that they have reached the lower course of the River Sereth. Since the fall of Bucharest the Teutonic forces have advanced 100 miles to the northeast to Fokshani. Petrograd dispatch received by the British admiralty per wireless press, says: "The war office communication issued today dealing with the campaign in Rumania reports the repulse of a Teutonic allied attack northwest of Fokshani, in which the invaders lost a large number of dead and wounded on the field. Attacks along the Sereth were also repulsed. The statement says: 'Rumanian front: After strong artillery prep action the enemy in the morning assumed the offensive in the direction of Petzesh, northwest of Fokshani and pressed back the Rumanians. Further movements by the enemy however, were stopped by the arrival of our reserves.' 'The enemy in its formation took the offensive on sectors of our position in the region of Pontocheski, northwest of Fokshani. Being met by our heavy fire they fell back, leaving a great number of killed or wounded. Our attacks north of Oloneka Ukota and at All, on the River Sereth, eight versts east of the mouth of the Buzeu, were also completely unsuccessful. A Berlin despatch says: The war office announced tonight that Field Marshal von Mackensen's troops are pursuing the Russians along the Fokshani-Moldavia. Today's German official communication says: 'Front of Archduke Joseph: Despite a snowstorm and severe cold weather, we again pushed back the enemy between the Putna and Otuz Valley. 'Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: Jan. 7 brought another great success to the ninth army, especially to the victorious German and Austro-Hungarian troops of Genor's Kraft von Dellmenningen and Von Morgen. They threw back the Rumanians and Russians from the strongly fortified main mass of Mount Odoebesti to the Putna. 'Further south the Milcov position, which had been constructed in October and was now tenaciously defended, was captured by storm and in hand-to-hand fighting. Pushing behind, we gave the enemy no time to settle himself in his second line on the canal between Fokshani and Yarets. This position, also was pierced, and, pressing further behind, we crossed the road from Fokshani to Bolotesti. 'This morning Fokshani was captured. From the captured fortifications 2,910 prisoners, three cannon and several machine guns were brought in. Our forces have reached the lower course of the River Sereth,' today's official Bulgarian statement asserted.

ERROR IN JUDGMENT CAUSED GOLLOP'S DEATH

Coroner's Jury Adds Rider to Finding on Street Railway Accident Case.

That George Gollop came to his death from concussion of the brain and pneumonia as a result of being struck by a Winchester street car driven by Motorman Ernest J. Robaghan was the verdict returned by the jury at the morgue last night under Coroner G. W. Graham. The jury also added a rider to the effect that from the evidence of Robaghan an error of judgment was shown on his part. Gollop was discharged from the 268th Battalion as being medically unfit on account of his poor eyesight. On the evening of December 29 he attempted to cross the roadway several yards beyond the crossing at Shuter and Church. The motorman testified that he rang the bell several times, and expected that Gollop would stop on the road and let the car pass. He did not apply the brakes until he struck Gollop, and it was on this point that the jury added their rider. Gollop was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, and died two days later. William Minors, who was walking north on Church street at the time of the accident, swore that the car was going at a rate of 25 miles an hour. Robaghan was then called and asked what rate of speed he was travelling, and his answer was nine miles an hour.

MAY CALL BROOKLYN PASTOR.

Chatham, Jan. 8.—There is a possibility that a call to the Rev. Mr. Barker of Brooklyn, N.Y., will be extended by the congregation of St. Andrew's Church to fill the pulpit recently vacated by the Rev. J. R. Vanwick, who is now in Bay City. A special committee of the church heard Rev. Mr. Barker preach in Detroit yesterday.

This is Interesting

WONDERFULLY NICE Japanese lacquer tea trays, in the tawny brown shade of satinwood, in leaf green, in black and in the soft Eastern tints of terra cotta and rose red. For the morning cup of tea in the bedroom, for the invalid's meal, for the score and one purposes for which a light-weight tray is in demand, they are the happiest choice imaginable. You may have them in square, round and oblong shapes, at the distinctly inexpensive amounts of 35, 40 and 50 cents each.

And while harping on the subject of color, mention should be made of the candlesticks and low bowls in a new mulberry shaded pottery—delightful for a bedroom or simple drawing-room with hints of that tone. They are 40, 65 and 85 cents each.

Very quaint to look at, and immensely useful to possess, are the Martha Washington sewing stands in solid mahogany at $8.00. Lift up the lids at either side of the handle—which comes up basket-wise in the centre—and behold the removable trays for spools, scissors, needles, etc., and underneath generous space for knitting or needlework.

And very reasonable in its attractiveness—a black lacquer fern or flower stand. Imagine it filled with daffodils, narcissus, hyacinths or any other of the Spring flowers which are pushing up through their bulbs in many a cellar at the present time. The price of it is $24.00.
