TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 30.

Responsibility for Victory

With the urgent need for action which attends the condition of affairs in France and Belgium, and the entry of the commanders at the front for reinforcements to keep the forces at full strength, combined with the measures taken in Great Britain to get every possible eligible man into the fighting line; there should be no longer any hesitation in Canada to take the step which will place at least another 150,000 men at the disposal of the British commander-in-chief. The only possible objection that can be raised is of a partisan political character. There is one simple way of disposing of that objection. It is the way of national government, adopted in Great Britain, in France, in Russia, everywhere that the supreme need exists for prompt and efficient action.

It has been stated in the house of commons, and in the press, it has been recognized generally that there is but one man who can take the important, the essential step of securing a national and a thoroughly effective government, and that is the prime minister. If he desires to have the utmost freedom for service, to be able to call upon any or all the people of the Dominion for all that they can do if he desires to free himself from the limitations which party responsibility imposes, and to assume the greater responsibility along with the wider freedom of doing what not a portion of the nation, but the whole nation desires; then he should take the step which Lloyd George took, and raise the question of the most effective, the most efficient method of carrying on the government of Canada until the war is ended.

It is impossible to say that everything is satisfactory as long as the army is not kept up to its maximum strength, especially in view of the critical campaign immediately in prospect, when failure to achieve victory means the indefinite prolongation of the war, with all its cost in life and material, and the terrible alternative of failure and an inglorious peace, with certain war in five or ten years again on a more sanguinary and dangerous scale than at present.

The whole country is anxious over the possibilities of the situation. The west is particularly desirous that there should be united action and the adoption of a policy that for the purposes of the war would bring all the forces and resources of the Dominion under the unreserved control of the government. The nation would respond with enthusiasm to such leading, and as far as party prestige goes the party that proposed it would impose upon all other sections of political opinion the necessity of adherence to such a policy, with the alternative of the ignominy that attaches to those who would falter in the face of the enemy.

While there remains a doubt about our victory over the foes of civilization and liberty, it is incumbent upon all who bear the burden of the nation's rule to strain every capability to reach the point of absolute mobilization of all that the nation can do to win. It is notorious that we are not doing our best and our most. The way to reach it has been taken by Britain and France. Why should we not follow them in organizing all our energies, political as well as material and financial and military, for the victory which we shall cease to exist as a British Dominion?

Deeds Talk Louder Than Words

A first-class disturbance in the political arena has been caused over the assertion of a Liberal member that the prime minister said a year ago that if he had his way there would be no more recruiting in Canada. It is one of the incredible facts of the situation that in the midst and at the crisis of the greatest war of the world, when civilization totters on its base, that Canadian politics should treat this as the most serious event on the political program. The prime minister will solemnly repudiate the allegation, and the party press will make glaring displays pro and con, and public attention will be diverted as far as possible from the fact, which is really important no matter what the prime minister or any one else said or did not say, that recruiting is in a shameful condition, and that we are not maintaining our forces as they ought to be maintained, while the generals at the front are sending messages to say that unless the drafts are maintained the war will go on indefinitely.

The best answer the prime minister can make to the charge that he does not favor further recruiting is to put the Militia Act in force, so as to restore and preserve the prestige of Canada in the circumstances of the war during the summer, when the lack of men at the front cannot be excused Obtaining Money Under False Pretences.

A case came before the police magistrate the other day in which conviction was secured and a fine imposed on a woman for selling on Sunday, on the evidence of a man who swore that he had told her a falsehood and played on her sympathies by describing himself as a tired munition worker, who toiled so late on Saturday nights that he was unable to make his purchases in legal time.

We are all responsible for this business of getting money under false pretences. That $5 should be heavy on the conscience of the city of Toronto. If we cannot secure enough evil deeds for punishment in legitimate ways, there must be a screw loose in our moral equipment when we conspire as a municipality to obtain money under false pretences and by deliberate falsehood.

This police agent, "munition worker" or whatever he was, represented Toronto, was the agent and servant of the city, and Toronto the good, Toronto the holy, and all her people, clerical and lay, are legally as well as morally responsible for his falsehoods, and for the method by which a fellow-citizen was tempted and entrapped into guilt.

HOUSING CO.'S RENTS.

Editor World: In an editorial in a recent issue you state, referring to the Toronto Housing Co.'s property on Bain avenue, that "the plan is simply to supply houses at moderate rents. Where there is no desire to make profit the problem is greatly simplified, and the slight interest return provided for by the housing company enables the tenants to rent their homes almost at cost." And also, "in this, as well as financially, the housing company has achieved a notable success."

What I would like to know is, if a notable success has been achieved, why should the Toronto Housing Company now circulate the tenants informing them that at the expiry of the present lease rentals will be advanced from $2 (in the case of smaller flats) to $3 in the larger ones. In the circular to the tenants the company says, "It was hoped that the rentals originally fixed would produce sufficient revenue." In face of the above-mentioned increases, the "notable financial success" wants a "rental" of $100,000 per annum.

Rents in the housing company's properties vary from $16 to $30, according to the size of the houses. The higher rent is for a six-roomed house with bath, heating and with hot water summer and winter. The following statement has been issued by the company: "In slightly advancing rentals the Housing Company, in a letter to the tenants, said: 'We have had the rentals originally fixed would produce sufficient revenue, but the war broke out about the time the apartments were nearing completion. The original rentals in part were modified, and it has been found necessary now, on account of the general advance in the cost of materials and labor, the great increase in the cost of coal, unexpectedly high taxes, and the necessity of providing sinking fund for the bonds guaranteed by the city, to slightly advance the rentals. The increases have been very carefully considered and are as small as is deemed wise by those charged with the responsibility for the success of the undertaking.'"

This is an exact statement of facts. Every tenant of the Toronto Housing Company works for a living. That fact should satisfactorily answer the question, "Were not the houses built for working men?" The object of the Housing Company was to provide improved housing at the lowest possible cost. The secretary of the National Housing Company, writing last week to a Toronto social worker, who had asked for information, said: "I assume, of course, that you are familiar with the splendid buildings of the Toronto Housing Company in your city. If not, I advise you to get in touch with the secretary of that company, Mr. W. S. B. Armstrong, and study their Riverside court buildings at Bain avenue. These buildings are among the best that have been done in model housing in America."

EMPIRE FIRST—PARTY SECOND.

Editor World: We have all felt a growing inclination in these critical "war" days to forget opposing doctrines of politics, and to overlook the actions of the government of which we may not approve, for we have only one aim, one interest—in fact it is our very life. A few days ago the wife of a well known Conservative was heard to remark in a Red Cross gathering of ladies of both parties: "Liberals are so disloyal." "Almost all the men at the front are Conservatives," and that "with one or two probable exceptions." Now, at a time when, as I remarked above, we are all inclining to bury our differences and to help the present government to do its best, this surely is the most unfortunate kind of policy that a Conservative could employ.

We are all aware of the sacrifice which many Liberal families have made; of the untiring work of the Toronto Women's Liberal Association, in which no one has heard party interests even mentioned since the war began. Thus we realize that these statements are the product of a misguided, though no doubt well meant, patriotism. One feels a positive repulsion and is grieved, for we know that this is not the feeling of the grand old "tory" party who are straining every effort for the empire, not for party politics.

Seeks Further Reduction in Libel Damages Awarded

Justice Riddell is hearing the case of J. H. Stewart, who has appealed from the judgment of $5,200 made against him in favor of Miss M. J. Quinn, a libel charge. Stewart, in April, 1915, wrote a letter to the employer of Miss Quinn in which he objected to her in connection with the young woman. Certain phrases he used led the woman to file a case of libel against him.

ASTHMA CURE BURNED.

When certain combustible ingredients of an asthma cure distributed from the Northrup and Lyman wholesale house, 38 West Richmond street, became overheated and caught fire yesterday, the top floor of the building was speedily filled with dense smoke. Fire immediately broke out in charge of the department, was about to turn off the metal dryer for the day when a heavy smudge overwhelmed him. He immediately sent in an alarm to the fire department. The damage, which amounts to $2,000, was due to smoke and water.
