Winnipeg Railway Dispute First for Joint Council

Winnipeg, April 21.—Wage disputes

HUMAN HAND IS MYSTERY STILL

for the hand was covered by dirt—the member did not bear the appearance of an anatomical specimen as the flesh was more like that of a duck which had been hanging for some time and the burning of the flesh by acid might be observable by an expert, but The World representative did not notice it. It was not the hand of a workman or one used to manual labor. It was a long lean hand with tapering fingers and the formation of the nails and the general appearance of the fingers gave the impression that the member belonged to a man in fairly good circumstances. In the hand had been one of the anatomical specimens used at the university it would be a dirty brown in color with rather long fingers and could be very easily identified as such by examining the arteries or veins contained in it, at Parr entry.

With a view of ascertaining if it were possible for a specimen to be stolen from the hospitals by any of the students for the purpose of playing a joke or creating a scare, The World yesterday interviewed one of the leading university officials who has to do with such matters. He said that, in his opinion, the hand could not possibly have come from the anatomical laboratories in connection with the university, due to the fact that a close check is kept on all the material supplied to the students who are dissecting, and each student is held responsible for the portion allotted to him or her, as the case might be. If a hand was stolen, the theft would soon be reported to the higher officials, which, up to the present, had not been done. With regard to it being stolen from the pathological department of one of the hospitals, the general appearance of the member contradicts this theory, for, where is a pathological specimen. It would be somewhat of a snowy-white in color and quite flexible, due to its prolonged immersion in the preservation fluid.

A Mysterious Parcel.
