BIG RUN OF SALMON, PRICES LIKELY LOWER

One haul of five hundred made in the harbor on Wednesday—Supply best this year.

Many of the city will find pleasure in the fact that today they will be able to enjoy their fish dinner, if they so desire, with a little more satisfaction to themselves both from a financial and appetizing standpoint. As salmon is supposed to be the most relished of all fish dinners, and as this fish will never this year be as plentiful as it is at the present time in the local market, it is not surprising that at a certain time there is a "run" of this variety of fish, and they are annually in wait for such periods so that they may reap a good harvest. "The run" is now on, and as a result salmon is today selling lower than it has yet been this season, and is probably retailing at the lowest it will sell while this fish is on the market. Salmon were caught in heavy quantities in the harbor on Wednesday evening and one of the fishermen reported that as the result of their day's toll they had scooped in altogether during the day something over five hundred big plump salmon. When it is considered that those operating at the wharves count a catch of fifty or sixty as a good day's catch it can be understood what a run there is of this fish when hundreds are netted in the one day. It was not expected that salmon would come in so plentiful at such an early date, and to the fishermen as well as the general public it indeed was a welcome surprise. Many of the five hundred of Wednesday's catch will no doubt find their way to the cold storage and will be introduced to the table about Christmas or thereabouts.

July 6th, recovered by Detective Killen and supposed to have been stolen from residence of S. B. Busin, St. James street by Herbert Goodspeed and Fred McDonough, one crescent brooch set with pearls and diamonds, one gold ring topaz setting, one gold heart with pearls on edge, one blue enamelled lady's watch, one pearl handled knife, and case, one looking glass and case, one silver neck chain, one gold chain bracelet and lock, four gold leaf stick pins, one pearl top pin, one gold key necklace pin, four fold neck chains, one silver neck chain, one gent's gold watch chain, nine earrings, one Kruger watch chain, pair cuff links with blue stone, one diamond ring, one gold ring, one gold pendant with emerald setting, two gold hearts, one gold heart with pearl and rubies settings, one gold leaf, one pearl pin, one small piece of gold chain and catch, two gold watchbands, one gold brooch with blue stone setting, one cuff link, one silver wire ring, one gold pin interlaid, two gold wire bracelets.

RUSHING WORK ON THE WHARVES AT SAND POINT

Four Hundred Men, Five Tugboats, 3 Dredges and 3 Reclamation Plants Employed.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR MORE STEAMERS SURE

Gigantic concrete distribution towers to be erected to facilitate the work—What is being done.

PROGRESS ON NEW WHARVES AT SAND POINT

Five hundred feet of wharf facing completed to required height. Eight hundred feet more cribs ready for the concrete top.

Four hundred men at work in two shifts. Five hundred cubic yards of sand and gravel cleaned each day. Three hundred yards of concrete poured each day.

Eighty thousand feet of timber used in crib construction each day. Four cribs have been sunk since the work started this summer. Four more cribs ready inside of two weeks.

One million five hundred feet of Georgia pine arrived in the harbor yesterday for the Maritime Dredging and Construction Company Ltd., to be used in constructing cribs for the new wharves in West St. John. The steamer Anna carried one million feet and the schooner Persis A. Gilwell had five hundred thousand feet. Besides this timber two million more feet are on order for delivery within the next month.

The contractors for the new wharves are putting forth every effort to have the berths ready for the early winter and they have every reason to believe that everything will be in readiness for the accommodation of steamers at the Maritime Dredging and Construction Company wharves. "There is no doubt that the new wharves will be ready for the winter business," said Manning W. Doherty, the manager of the Maritime Dredging and Construction Company, Ltd. "Some people have said that the reclamation work necessary for the foundation of the freight sheds will not be completed in time. There is a large amount of filling yet to be done, but we expect to have it completed by the end of the month. The sheds may start work about the middle of August."

Reclamation Plants.

The Construction Company now has two of the largest reclamation plants available at work, and another plant is in course of installation and will be in operation before the end of next week.

At present the scene at Sand Point is a busy one. Concrete mixers, sand washers, ballast trains, clam shells and dredges are working away as well as three big dredges, five tug boats and nearly four hundred men are hard at work straining to the limit to get the work completed in time for the winter port trade.

In order to carry the work along the construction company has found it necessary to construct a huge trestle and a narrow gauge railway. Besides a locomotive there are several stationary engines with which attachments that haul trains back and forth.

Huge Towers. Within the next few days the company will start the construction of two large concrete distribution towers for the better handling of the concrete. These towers will be eighty-five feet high and the long chutes from them will convey the concrete to the different points where it is to be moulded into the fabric of the wharf.

Yesterday afternoon another crib was sunk and in this operation four tug boats and many scow loads of stone were used. Five hundred feet of wharfage is already completed with fenders, walkways, sewer openings, mooring posts and ladders.

Sinking Cribs.

In the construction of the wharves, first the crib work of hard pine is sunk with huge stones as ballast. The crib work is completely filled and then upon this the concrete face of the wharf is laid. Below the low water mark permanent forms are used. These are constructed of two inch planks treated with a special preparation. These protect the face of the wharf from the action of the waves. The concrete is built up to the required elevation in the form of a large retaining wall and then the fill is made by dredging from the front of the wharf. For the fill the material dredged from in front of the wharves is used. The dredges dump the sand and gravel into scows and at high water these are dumped in front of either of the huge clam buckets of the reclamation plants and then transferred to the waiting cars. Material that may be used for concrete work is hauled to a special machine where the material is automatically washed and sorted. The sand is conveyed to one pile and the gravel placed in its proper station. Every facility for the economic handling of these materials has been installed and the working of the gravel washer and sorter is particularly interesting.
