At 9 o'clock mass, Bishop Casey referred to the coronation. He pointed out the coronation was large crown as a large crown suspended over an elevated throne on which sat Miss Edith Hilyard, costumed to represent Britannia. Two small fixed pieces, each in charge of a youthful red coat, were mounted in front, and four stalwart members of the club uniformed as guards proved very exciting. Acrobatic feats, buck and wing dancing and amusements of different kinds added to the day's enjoyment. The Annapolis Royal band discoursed musical selections.

He pointed out the people's duty of loyalty to the sovereign and spoke of how the prayers for his majesty's recovery from this illness had been heard, and urged the prayers of his people for a blessing upon King England, Donald Fraser & Sons, and John A. Morrison. Messrs. Fraser had three four-horse teams in the procession, the first being loaded with spruce logs, and the third box shooks done up in bundles all ready for shipment. Mr. Morrison showed a street Free Baptist church, Rev. David Long spoke from the text: "He turneth his curse into a blessing because he loved them."
