foundations while the other is completing the main structure. There was some delay when the second company took over, as the bill of material had not been approved, and just recently there was a shortage of bricks, which halted work for three weeks.

At present, work is being completed on the top floor only, which will house approximately fifty men. The expected completion date for the whole building is the end of October.

Meanwhile where are the residents of MacKenzie House living? It seems one can find a MacKenzie House resident in many places on and off campus. Some are living three to a room in Jones and Aitken while others are crowded two to a room in the singles of the other residences. Still others, when hearing wind of "no place to live" made arrangements downtown. It is hoped that these students will find replacements when they vacate and move "up the hill".

Incidentally, one unique feature of MacKenzie is its floors — they are made to reduce noise.

DINING HALL WINGS

Two small wings have been added to the men's Dining Hall. They will give the space needed immediately to serve the increased number of students in the residence complex. The expansion provides more dishwashing facilities and a staff dining area. The new space and equipment will supplement serious shortages that have hampered service at McConnell for nearly three years.

DAWSON'S BUILDING AT LAST

Last year the Brunswickan mentioned that a new building for the Maintenance department would be constructed near the heating plant.

The huge addition will house most of the department's equipment, and is expected to be satisfactory to accommodate the University's needs for the next few years.

It includes space for staff to congregate in periods between duties.

BOOKSTORE - BANK EXTENSION

An extension to the University bookstore-bank building is under construction. The building, located just below the Campus Services (Maintenance) Building, houses the Bank of Montreal (University Campus Branch) and the bookstore.

A Revolution

as females cannot be expected to go out and cut down a tree or saw logs the same way a man does but we still can do the same things in the brains department.

Sue: There will be a personal satisfaction after five years of study and consequently, an enjoyment of the woods. Even though we might be in executive positions we will know we have first hand knowledge about the woods.

Carol: I agree with both the other girls. As long as we attain the same marks as the men why can't we do just as much to aid forestry as they do. Chopping a tree or logging isn't the only thing in Forestry.

Brunswickan: With these attitudes how do you expect to be treated by your classmates?

Emmy: They will treasure us or resent us on this point.

Sue: I agree.

Carol: I expect to be treated on an equal basis. We have the same entrance requirements, therefore shouldn't we have the same treatment? We should not be discriminated against. It should not bother them. I don't feel I'm intruding on men's rights.

Emmy: It's a novelty for them although that doesn't sound good. If we can equal the men's studies, they should accept us. We realize that we will never equal them at spring camp or at the Hammerfest. I would definitely like to enter into these events but I realize that it would mean a loss of my femininity. We just ask them not to resent our presence. I would like to learn. They must realize that this is not a novelty for us and we have come to learn. I'm very wary about the whole situation. It's rather confusing.

Carol: I never realized that this was so unusual until I arrived. What is so unusual? It's the same thing as any other course as far as I am concerned.

Brunswickan: What would your plans have been had you not been accepted and found it too difficult to stay in Forestry?

Emmy: I'd change to Engineering or the Sciences. But I think I can overcome most problems with will power. I really want this and trivial criticism won't bother me.

Sue: I think I would transfer to UBC.

I still say if we can keep up with them academically we should be accepted with no questions asked.

Carol: I'll probably find out by the end of the year or next whether I really want this as much as I do now. I would switch into Science if I did decide against it. But one thing — I don't feel that I have to go through with it just because other people expect it. If I think I'm capable, then I'll do it.

Brunswickan: What are the others' reactions to your taking forestry?

Emmy: "You're crazy." "Boy! Have you got ambition?" The guys think we're really nuts, I guess.

Sue: "I get the same reactions."

Carol: Yesterday in the parking lot outside I told somebody I was in forestry and they asked me how the Dean ever (See page 10, column 3)
