

"God Knows My Name."

MARBLET 31 SKITMOORE (MARIE) IN PORTLAND "CATHOLIC SENTINEL."

[A poor woman in Boston gave a hundred dollars, the entire savings of years of labor, to the Irish Relief Fund, and when the priest, into whose charge she gave it asked her name, she said, "God knows my name, Father." This beautiful example of noble charity united with true humility suggested the following verses.]

From the riven heart of Erin
Came the wild and wailing cry,
"Upon my blighted bosom
My famished children lie,
O, sister lands! where do you lie?
Abundance full and free,
O, exiled sons and daughters,
Send aid from over the sea."
Swift sped that cry of anguish
Far o'er the billows' crest,
And rang, in wailing echoes,
Throughout the boundless West.
And stranger hearts benighted,
(In fondest union blent
With Erin's truest exiles)
A generous answer sent.
The rich man gives his thousands,
The poor his willing mite,
And over all the smile of God
Is shed with loving light.
Aid the generous legions
Who sent their kindly aid,
From out the fair Queen City,
That rules New England's shore,
Came out the fair Quakers,
High spent with toil and age—
(O, write her name, daughter,
On Love's shrine of prayer)
And, Time, advance thy age,
Bring out each true-hearted word
That from these lips heroic,
The wondrous Father said,
"I've brought my savings, Father,"
She returned "my dear tears—
Sole fruits of weary years,
Yet freely do I give them,
As I my blood would shed,
To still poor Ireland's anguish—
To buy the starving bread."
A hundred treasured dollars—
Her hard-earned gift—her aid,
Adown thy cheeks, good Father,
Will may the tear-rain fall.
"My noble child," he murmurs,
"Quick! tell me now thy name!"
That gratitude may trail
First on the scroll of Fame.
For, O, thy gift is royal,
All, all thy sacred store—
The fruit of all thy labor—
"Say," wrote to name, I pray you,
She said in whisper low,
"God knows my name, my Father,
And He alone, should I know."
Ay, Erin's humble daughter,
What need of earthly name,
Thou hast a crown eternal.
For God hath written NAME,
Ay, tender heart of woman!
So full of Christ-like love,
He knows, and writes forever
That name in light above.

NEWS FROM IRELAND.

DUBLIN.

A meeting of the Mansion House Relief Fund Committee, held on July 31st. The balance in hand was £4,580 odd. Resolutions were adopted asking the Government to make the Committee a grant equaling the cost incurred by them for postage, telegraphing, and stamp duty on cheques, and ordering their accounts to be audited.

On July 31st, Simon Carthy, No. 8 Sandwich-place, Dublin, aged 43 years, a drayman, was standing close by a horse that was being yoked to a wagon, belonging to the Alliance Gas Company, when the animal started and kicked him on the head. The unfortunate man died the following day.

The alteration in the name of Carlisle Bridge, Dublin, which was sometime since decided on by the Municipal Council, was formally effected on Aug. 6th.

KING'S COUNTY.

Master Andrew Chisell, son of James Chisell, Esq., Ballinacorney, Tullamore, was accidentally shot by his brother and died on Aug. 6th.

A threatening letter has been addressed to Mr. Charles Dunne, of Ballycumber House, King's County, in connection with the eviction of tenants named Heaton who were living on some property recently purchased by Mr. Dunne.

At the monthly meeting of the Birr Town Commissioners, held on Aug. 2nd, a memorial was received from the inhabitants of Crinkle, praying that the Commissioner would take steps to cause additional military to be quartered in the barracks. A deputation of the trades of the town also waited on the Commissioner for a similar purpose.

WEXFORD.

On Aug. 4, a gentleman named William Armstrong, a leading corn merchant of New Ross, went out in the river for the purpose of bathing, accompanied by his two sons, the eldest not more than twelve years. There was a strong current running at the time, which swept him out into the Channel. Not being able to get in he cried out for help to his children, who were unable to do so, but threw him a life belt, which the deceased attempted to grasp, but missed, and sank.

KILKENNY.

Mr. Edmund Tobin, of Crane, Kilkenny, writes to the Journal, in which he describes the return of Mrs. Brennan, a widow, who had been ejected for owing only one year's rent, and "when the amount in full was tendered to the law agent he bluntly refused it without an additional half year's rent." However, a number of generous friends made up the money for the distressed tenant, on which occasion they held a little reunion at the widow's house, where cheerfulness, coupled with friendship, became the order of the day.

LONGFORD.

On Aug. 5th, the second anniversary of the late Bishop Conroy, of Ardhagh and Clonmacnoise took place, in the Cathedral, Longford. The new altar of the Sacred Heart, intended as a memorial of the late Bishop, has been erected in the cathedral, and is almost completed. It is built of precious marbles of different colors, of which the principal are porphyry, onyx and malachite. The memorial cross has also been raised at the head of the grave in the Nun's Cemetery. It stands out prominently, and is seen from all the principal roads. It is excellently carved with panels and scroll work of the old Irish style, and stands with platform and pedestal twelve feet high. There are inscriptions in Latin and English which tell the life and death of one of Ireland's most distinguished Bishops, who was known in two hemispheres for his eloquence and learning and gentle virtues, who was entrusted with a delegation which extended over a great part of the American Continent, and died at the early age of 45.

CORK.

Rumors of intended evictions were never more rife in the Mitchelstown quarter than at the present time, and are, unfortunately, but too painfully true in most instances. Captain Bowen has just cleared off the entire townland of Farrally through the instrumentality of the eviction.

On July 29th, Mr. Robert Cambridge, Sheriff's officer and his assistants proceeded to the land of Dunneen, the property of Mr. W. J. Henzly, near Rosscarbery, and took possession of a farm of 36 acres, held by a man named Edward Molony. The decree for possession was obtained at the Bantry Sessions. The man did not reside on the farm; he has a shop in Rosscarbery, and owed ten years' rent which amounted to £540.

On July 30th a farmer named Milnean, who lived near Athea, was proceeding home from Listowel Butter Market when his horse became restive and unmanageable. In his effort to check the horse he fell out of the car, which then rolled over him, inflicting on him such fatal injuries that he died immediately after.

On July 31st, a young woman named Ellen Sheehan living with her father at Glenamoy, a few miles outside Katurk, was accidentally killed in a field near her house while saving hay.

On July 30th a sad accident occurred at Kinsale, through a boatman named Kirrigh and two young farmers, named Daniel Reilly and William Drinan, were drowned. A young woman named Catherine Reilly, wife of a laborer, gave birth to three children, on August 5th. One of the children died. The other two are living, and they and their mother are doing well. An application has been forwarded to the Queen for the usual gratuity given to a mother on such occasions.

LIMERICK.

On Aug. 1st, threatening notes were found posted in proximity to the house of worship in the fishing village of Castle Connell. They were directed principally against Mr. Dudley, agent, and Cain, bailiff, of Lady De Burgho, who resides close to the village, on account of a man named Walsh, for many years in her service, having been discharged.

The Rev. John Clifford, P. P., died at his residence in Monagee, on the 1st of August.

CLARE.

On the evening of July 31st, Mr. Robert Smith, cashier in the Munster Bank, Ennis, with his wife and Mr. O'Callaghan, also a clerk in the Munster Bank, went out in a pair-oar boat, on the river, and enjoyed themselves for about an hour. When returning home at a point near Cleonard Bridge, where a furious current prevails at the fall of the tide, the craft partially stranded upon a rock. Mr. O'Callaghan leaped out, and waded ashore. Almost immediately the boat upset, turning completely over. Mrs. Smith came up quickly, and caught the boat, to which she clung for a long time, until Messrs. Geo. Milward and O'Callaghan, in a boat belonging to Mr. Milward, pulling to her assistance, and reached her just as she was dropping off exhausted and insensible. Mr. Smith was only seen to rise on the bank, and then he disappeared.

The esteem in which the late Father McGrath, C. C., Clare Castle, was held by his fellow-priests, may be inferred from the handsome tablet erected to his memory in Ogonelloe chapel, the contributions, to which were chiefly spontaneous, lined in amount, and consisted almost exclusively to his college contemporaries. It reflects great credit on Mr. Sheehan, Kilkelloe, at whose marble works it was manufactured.

TIPPERARY.

On July 31st, a sheriff's bailiff, named David Fennessy, reported to the police at Clonkeen that at about half-past four o'clock that morning six men with blackened faces entered Kilbury House, in which he was stationed as caretaker, and drove him out of the place. The form of Kilbury is the one occupied by Henry E. Meagher, who was evicted. The eviction of the Meaghers created a great deal of excitement at the time, and was followed by the Meaghers taking full possession and resisting the sheriff and the police, who, in turning them out, were attacked and beaten, the result being that several arrests were made, and the parties returned for trial at the Clonmel Assizes. Since then the landlord put one Robert Maher into possession, but he did not reside on the farm, putting in Fennessy, a sheriff's bailiff, who was guarded nightly for months past by a body of police. As usual the police, on the night of the outrage, remained with Fennessy until about half-past four o'clock in the morning, when they returned to their barracks. Scarcely had they gone when the house was attacked by six men with blackened faces and black work, who quickly effected an entrance. Once in, they seized Fennessy, made him go down on his knees and raise his hands to Heaven. At the same time two of the party presented a pistol at each ear, and in that position they made him swear that if his life was spared he would leave and never again return to the house. Fennessy swore as they dictated. Tying his hands behind his back they escorted him as far as the high road, when, after making him again kneel and swear never to return, they allowed him to proceed, escorted him to almost opposite the Clonkeen barracks, where the affair was reported to the police, who arrested Henry E. Meagher, the late tenant, and on searching him found a revolver unloaded. Later on, they arrested Robert Meagher, Thomas Meagher, and John Kane, farm-laborer. The prisoners were brought before Mr. Jerome Guiry, J. P. During the investigation Henry E. Meagher stated that during the night four men, whom he did not know, as they had blackened faces, came to his place and forcibly made him leave the house, and accompanied them to Kilbury House, for the purpose, as they stated, of putting out the landlord's caretaker, and putting him again into possession of his farm. The result of the investigation was that Thomas and Robert Meagher were discharged, but Henry E. Meagher and Kane were returned for trial, and were admitted to bail, themselves in £50 and two sureties in £25 each.

ARMAGH.

On August 15th, Mr. Simpson, solicitor, and Mr. Boyle, sheriff, proceeded with two bailiffs to the lands of Brackley, near Keady, to execute a decree. They seized some horses and cows, after which a mob numbering over two hundred, rescued the cattle, and assaulted the sheriff and his men. The sheriff proceeded to Keady and brought out the police, but the mob, cattle and horses had disappeared. The sheriff and Mr. Simpson have sworn information against several of their assailants.

The dreaded potato blight has definitely made its appearance in several places throughout the county Armagh.

DOWN.

A number of young lads were recently amusing themselves with a hoist at the Albert Basin, Newry, when a boy named Murphy was caught by the chain and lifted up by the neck. His companions could not liberate him, and he received injuries that proved fatal.

On August 1st, the dead body of John Feenan, keeper of the scotch lock on the Newry Canal, was found in the waterway near his house. It is supposed that on the previous night while doing something to the gates, he fell in, and was drowned. Feenan, who was a sober man, leaves a wife and family to mourn his sad death.

DONEGAL.

A cable dispatch from Londonderry states that during a heavy thunder-storm, on the 15th instant ("Lady Day"), a terrible flood swept the glen of Glendonegal, flooded the parish church of Conneen, and imperilled the entire congregation, which was at Mass at the time. The freshet came with fearful suddenness, inundating the sacred edifice in a moment.

Several of the congregation were swept away while attempting to escape. Some of these were subsequently rescued, while others were drowned. The officiating priest, after doing all that lay in his power to save his flock, succeeded in gaining a safe position on high ground. The bridge across the stream at that point was entirely demolished. Great excitement was created in the neighborhood. Parties of men were engaged in searching for the bodies of the drowned. Five bodies have been recovered, and 11 persons were missing.

MAYO.

On August 4th a display of very unusual character took place in Swinford. A crowd of about 100 men, the leading class, accompanied by their wives, carrying children in their arms, paraded the town, loudly demanding food. They proceeded in a body to the residence of the Rev. Father Conlan, C. C., where their demands assumed a very threatening aspect. The usual fortnightly supply of meat was stopped on July 24th, consequent on the want of funds. There is no work in the place at present. Field labor there is scarcely any by reason of the recent rain, and the so-called "relief works" have proved a mere sham, the only "work" being a few footpaths, which afford no relief to anyone except the contractors. Out-door relief has also come to an end, and where there is a large population dependent for their livelihood on their daily toil this is a very serious matter indeed. Altogether the outlook is a gloomy one for the "landless," and unless the benevolent—through the Mansion House Committee and the Land League, come to the rescue, the long-forlorn hope of the landless will bring no comfort to the wretched inhabitants of "Mill-street."
