to lose, when his hopes are all beyond the grave, when we listen without terror to the ebbings and flowings of the tide of life and rush of its storms—then, after the night, to us the day will come back, and after the tempest a great calm. We know then that it is God's work, and that God loves us better than we can love ourselves. We know then that all our life is guided by him, so that we find consolation and contentment; and if we have those two things with us—consolation in all sorrows and contentment in any loss—we have the richest blessings which God can give us.—Archdeacon Farrar

Child Heroism.

Two touching occurrences are reported in the English papers illustrating the pathetic heroism sometimes to be found in children. The wonderful presence of mind, fortitude and self-command shown in both cases awaken a sense almost of reverence towards the little lads who, each in his own way, risked his own life to save others.

The first is the account of an inquest held at Walthamstow, near London, on Henry James Bristow, aged eight years. This little boy had been left alone in the house with a younger sister of three, their mother being out on an errand. In her absence the little girl climbed on a chair to reach a paraffine lamp and upset it over her clothes, which, of course, took fire at once. The boy immediately tore them off her and laid her upon the bed; but in lifting her on the bed his own clothes caught fire, and it took the child a long time to tear them off, which, however, he at last succeeded in doing, but not till he was so seriously hurt, that though taken at once to a hospital, he died within a week. His little sister's life he succeeded in saving.

By a curious coincidence about the same time, the story of another almost equally brave little man is reported from Folkestone, where a cottage in which a whole family were sleeping was carried away in a landslip, burying in its ruins the father, mother and infant sister of the youthful hero. When the accident took place William Heyward, aged only ten, was sleeping in the same room with his sister Jane, aged eight, and a little brother just one year and eight months old. He woke up feeling very cold, and found that he was lying in the open field with nothing over him. His first thought was to call for his sister and baby brother, and, hearing their answering cries, he went to them, and lifted off a large piece of thatch from the roof, which covered them. Then taking the baby in his arms, his sister leading the way, in the darkness and the rain, and over fences and wattles to a neighbor's house, who got up, heard their story, made a fire and then put the children into his own bed. The child was so occupied with his own care that he did not seem to think, as he said, about his father and mother. The coroner might well commend this brave little boy who showed such presence of mind, and told in the court so simple and straightforward a story. The mayor of Folkestone has formed a committee to raise a fund for the maintenance of the little orphans.

RIDGE'S FOOD

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

Dr. Barker of the Brighton (England) Hospital says, "Ridge's Food resembles mother's milk so closely that infants are reared, and well reared, exclusively upon it." Another physician, at the head of an orphan asylum, says, "I have been using this preparation for five years or more, and have the most unbounded faith in it." Another says, "I had long tried to procure for a pair of twins in my practice a food that would not acidulate, etc." Ridge's Food fulfils the condition perfectly.
