

NO REST FOR TERRIBLE ITCH

THE OIL OF WINTERGREEN COMPOUND MADE HIS SKIN AS PURE AS EVER.

Mr. James Lulloch, of Iron Bridge, Ont., considers the D. D. D. Prescription of oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., a wonderful cure for skin troubles. He has good reason to think so, too, according to his letter of Mar. 27, 1909.

"I have suffered for years," he says, "with eczema, and now through using two bottles of your wonderful cure, my skin is as pure as it ever was. My face was so bad I could not see. I could not sleep. I could not rest at all for the terrible itch. Thanks to your wonderful medicine I am cured."

As eczema is a germ disease, and as the germs are right in the skin, blood medicines will not cure it. The only effective way is to treat the itch where the itch is. D. D. D. Prescription penetrates the pores of the skin, kills the germs which cause the eczema, gives instant relief from the awful itch and permanently cures.

An appreciative subscriber contributes the following forecast of fashions—a treasure from an old scrap-book:

The lady of 1910 will be clothed in her right mind.

Thinking caps will be more generally worn by both sexes of all ages than ever before.

The veiled sleeve of care, too, is to be quite out of date.

The "cloak of religion" is to be a thing of the past.

Breeches of promise will also be out of date.

The clasp of friendship and links of affection are to be fashionable jewels.

Very few persons will wear the crown of sorrow.

In jewelry, chains of thought will be more common.

WIT AND HUMOR

SALVATION BY PIPE LINE

The colored parson had just concluded a powerful sermon on "Salvation am Free," and was announcing that a collection would be taken for the benefit of the parson and his family. Up jumped an acutely brunette brother in the back of the church.

"Look a-year, pahson," he interrupted, "yo, ain't no sooner done tellin' us dat salvation am free dan yo go askin' us fo' money. If salvation am free, what's de use in payin' fo' it? Dat's what I want to know. An' I tell yo' p'intedly dat I ain't goin' to gib yo' nothin' until I find out. Now—"

"Patience, brudder, patience," said the parson. "I'll lucidate: S'pose yo' was thirsty an' come to a river. Yo' could kneel right down an' drink yo' fill, couldn't yo'? An' it wouldn't cost yo' nothin', would it?"

"Ob cou'se not. Dat's jest what I—"

"Dat water would be free," continued the parson. "But s'posin' yo' was to hab dat water piped to yo' house? Yo'd have to pay, wouldn't yo'?"

"Yas, suh, but—"

"Wal, brudder, so it is wid salvation. De salvation am free, but it's de havin' it piped to yo' dat yo' got to pay fo'. Pass de hat, deacon, pass de hat."—Everybody's Magazine.

It is not at all surprising that the American vernacular should sometimes prove a little too much for the Englishman. A case in point was that of a visitor from London who came to New York last summer and was taken by his host to see one of the league baseball games at the Polo grounds. The game had progressed as far as the third inning without anything in particular happening, when suddenly one of the Giants pounded out a three-bagger that set everybody howling with joy.

"That was a bird!" ejaculated the Englishman's host, after the excitement had subsided.

A moment later a foul tip sent the ball flying back into the grand-stand.

"And what do you call that?" queried the Englishman.

"That is a fowl," said his host.

"Ah," returned the Englishman, "a fowl, eh? Well, it seems to me that the language of baseball is most extraordinary. A fowl is a bird and a bird is a fowl, and yet you use those terms to describe two plays that seem to me to be diametrically opposed to each other. Do you call that logical?"

"Yes," said the American. "Ornithological."

Some time ago the excursion steamer returning from Alaska to Seattle dislocated its propeller in a dreary portion of the inner passage and came to a forced stop. For two days the vessel's engineers and machinists set to repair the break, but without success. Two of the boats were manned and dispatched for aid to Victoria, three hundred miles away. In the meantime it was discovered that the ship's stores were not abundant. Alarm bred in the minds of the pessimistic passengers, and the contagion spread. Starvation might assail the vessel before help arrived. A former official took it on himself to restore his timid companions, but his effort was not perfectly adapted to raise drooping spirits. In fact, his closing sentences but added to the gloom. "Let us be brave," he said. "If the worst comes and that dread necessity which in such misadventures has met others must be faced by us, let us remember that it is good to die that our friends may live. The one or more that may be sacrificed will be considered by that thought." There was a moment's silence, awful in its intensity; then a cheerful voice was heard. "You should be taken first, Governor. You know the bravest are the tenderest." And even the terror-stricken smiled once more.

Makes the Neatest, Smoothest Bales

Your hay will bring a higher price if pressed into bales by the Dain Pull Power Press, because Joseph Dain's patented tucker makes bales that no other hay press can duplicate. They are smoother, neater, more firmly compressed. The skeleton drawing will give you an idea of the principle of the Dain tucker, and we advise you to study it carefully.

A is the tucker. It is a plate, the width of the bale chamber, with a flange at the top and a lip at the bottom. The tucker is pivoted on B, which is a strong rod attached to the top of the bale chamber. C C are two coil springs. One end is attached to the flange of the tucker, the other to the top of the baling case. D is the plunger that compresses the hay. The bottom of the tucker is a little above the top of the plunger. When the plunger starts, the tucker is straight up and down.

As the plunger moves in, the hay draws the tucker inward, as shown in the illustration. When the plunger moves out the coil springs, C C, force the tucker back to its former straight up and down position, and, as it returns back, the lip at the bottom folds the overlap down flat and even without wadding. The completed bale is smooth on both top and bottom.

The Dain does the fastest baling—and without overtaxing either man or beast. It has a wide feed opening. You have lots of time to put in a big charge of hay. The feed table is convenient and the plunger remains still and the feed chamber opens its full length on one-fifth of the circle. The immense leverage, 160 to 1, allows us to use the short nine foot sweep. Thus, in the same time, the team travels around the circle more often and more hay is baled than when horses have to complete a wider circle. For greatest convenience in operating, moving and setting, for greatest durability, buy the Dain Pull Power Full Circle All Steel Press. But first send to us for catalog and prices. And do it right away.
