

There is only one tea to people of discriminating taste and that is

Blue Ribbon Ceylon Tea

It has no unpleasant flavor to pall on one. Simply a rich aroma and a charming delicacy.

Black, Mixed, Ceylon Green. Ask for Red Label. FORTY CENTS—SHOULD BE FIFTY

The Rose and Lily Dagger

A TALE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AND WOMAN'S PERFDY

"Not always, there is something... something that has happened to him in the past; but— he pauses a moment— "but I hope, I think that he will be happy, that he will learn to forget whatever it is that has cast a shadow over his life. I would give my life to make him happy."

Then as the major goes off, with a final bow, to bestow his attentions on Lady Dornier, she leans back and thinks with half closed eyes. "Elaine has had an affair already! Does the marquis know of it? I wonder? If not, it may be useful. It is war to the knife between us, my dear cousin; and though you may think yourself secure, I may win after all."

CHAPTER XV. May and her lover, Gerald Locke, are cozily nestled in a remote corner of the drawing-room, exchanging the delightful confidences of sweethearts. Lady Dornier, who the marquis has instructed his barrister to give him a brief in an important case, and the young lawyer is in charming anticipation of the opportunity to display his legal ability.

The marquis seats himself beside her and talks for a little while; but just as it was at the ball, so it is now, and Lady Blanche knows that though he talks so easily and fluently, his eyes are wandering to where Elaine bends over an album with Lady Scott.

"The major, forgetting that the earl has not yet expressed any desire to make Elaine's acquaintance, bows and smiles gratefully. "So good of you," he says. "It will be a great treat for her. She goes out so seldom."

"No," he says. "I don't know why I should tell you. I don't know why I should tell you. I don't know why I should tell you."

"Indeed," says Lady Blanche, and she forces an expression of kindly interest into her face, but her lips tighten. Has she not just repeated his offer in due form?

"Yes," she continues. "I don't know whether you noticed a tall, fair man at the ball—perhaps you may have heard his name—a Captain Sherwin."

Lady Blanche looks up with a flash in her cold blue eyes. This, every item of information concerning Elaine may be of value in the coming struggle.

"Yes, I think I did hear it. Oh, yes, I remember the man. And he has proposed to Elaine?"

"The major nods with an air of grave importance. "Yes, some days ago. It was, taking it all together, a very fair offer. But, perhaps, as Elaine, considering our family— But he is a very decent young fellow, with good expectations, very good indeed."

"And Elaine refused him?" asks Lady Blanche. "The major nods again. "Yes, she refused him. I was sorry at the time, but—well, well, one never knows. Perhaps it was for the best." He glances round the room, and his eyes rest upon the marquis, who is standing in the centre of a group.

A WOMAN'S ADVICE

To Those Who Suffer From Headaches, Backaches and Ailments Peculiar to the Sex.

Every woman needs plenty of pure, rich, red blood and sound nerves to carry her safely through her times of youth and maturity. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good in a special way for women. They actually make new health-giving blood. They give ease, strength and vigor. They stimulate all the organs to perform their functions regularly and well. They banish all pains and depression, all headaches and backaches, and all the secret distress that only a woman knows.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills bring the sparkle to dull eyes and the rosy glow of health to cheeks once pale. They bring health and strength when all else fails. Here is a bit of strong proof from Mrs. John McKerr, Chickney, N. Y. T. who says: "For some years I was greatly afflicted with the ailments that make the lives of so many of my sex miserable. I tried many medicines, but found nothing to relieve me until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have made me feel like a new person; the almost continuous suffering I endured has passed away, and life no longer seems the burden it once did. I have a better woman who has been similarly benefited, and I think the pills are worth their weight in gold to all who suffer from female complaints or general prostration."

All the ladies are suffering from woman who can obtain new health and strength through the use of these pills. Only the genuine should be taken, and these bear the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all dealers at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, or sent by mail by writing to Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

commenced by pretending to be in love, but love has a knack of revealing itself and turning the tables; and for the first time Fanny has discovered she has a heart, and that she has lost it to this man whom she treated as a dupe. It is not acting, but genuine pathos that rings in her appeal—that appeal that is as old as the world itself, "If you will only love me."

WOULD AVOID CHURCH.

Long-Winded and Vociferous Bishop Found No Favor With a Child.

There is a certain bishop whose piety is unquestioned, but who has an unfortunate habit of preaching very long sermons. He has, besides, an exceedingly sonorous voice, and people living anywhere within a block of his church can hear him without taking the trouble to enter the sanctuary. A few Sundays ago he was announced to preach at a popular church, and the family who entertained him had a little daughter who was very fond of attending service. When the family got ready to go, the little girl refused to go with them.

"I don't want to go to church," she declared. "What's the matter," asked the mother, much surprised; "are you ill?" "I don't like the bishop," confessed the child. "Oh, Elsie, that's a wicked thing to say," cried the mother. "I hate the bishop," insisted the little one.

"Tell mother why," said the hostess. "Well," said Elsie, confidently, "the bishop preaches so long that I can't keep awake and he preaches so loud that I can't go to sleep. As the mother told the story on herself, it's probably true."

Allowance for Wives. Should the wife have an allowance, a definite sum set apart out of the family income for herself, or should she have to ask her husband, as if it were charity, for money with which to buy her hats, gloves, ribbons and the thousand and one necessities of life? Men are apt to think that because women do not do the work for which they, the men, are paid, they have no part in earning it, and are sooner or later inclined to say, "What is the quarter I gave you yesterday?"

Marriage is a partnership in a special sense, in which the man is generally the bread winner; but it by no means follows that the woman is merely an ornament or a doll arrayed in pretty dresses or house gowns. In the ideal home the wife bears her share of the burdens that must come, it would seem, to us all. Her duties are multifarious, and when she has done all she is expected to be a companion for her husband and to be interested in the things in which he is interested. This is just as much contribution to the household happiness and comfort as the money the husband brings home every week. In business matters the wife should have an allowance, and should not have a false sentiment about asking for it.—Woman's Home Companion.

Only One Way. "In these days," he sighed, "it is difficult to convince a girl of your sincere admiration." "How so?" she asked. "Why, if you tell her she is pretty she thinks you mean to infer that she is stupid; if you tell her she is clever she is disagreeable, and if you tell her she is amiable she concludes that you do not think her pretty."

"Still," she said, thoughtfully, "there is a way to convince her on all points. One is reasonably certain what a man thinks when he— " "Yes, of course," he interrupted, "as he took her hand and put to her the momentous question. "But," he added, after a very busy interlude, "if that is the only way of giving a girl a compliment that hasn't a sting to it, a fellow has got to be somewhat ungracious and illiberal to keep out of trouble."—Chicago Post.

Growing Forage Crops.

Feeders of Live Stock Should Prepare for the Summer Droughts.

Department of Agriculture, Commissioner's Branch, Ottawa, June 4, 1903. Nearly every summer we hear the same old story of midsummer droughts and consequently scanty pastures. Many of our best farmers have learned to guard against loss by having a supply of succulent feed to fall back upon in case the pasture fails. A small silo, filled especially for summer use, will go a long way to meet the difficulty, and a partial system of soiling has also found favor among progressive stockmen.

The Live Stock Commissioner, Mr. F. W. Holston, has frequently drawn attention to the advisability of growing some green crops for summer feeding, and has recommended a number of such crops as suitable for general growth, but only a few of these periods during which each will be available. Rye, clover, rape, peas and oats, vetches, millet, sorghum, and corn will afford satisfactory pastures. It is not necessary to consider the most suitable crops to grow, and the periods during which each will be available. Rye, clover, rape, peas and oats, vetches, millet, sorghum, and corn will afford satisfactory pastures. It is not necessary to consider the most suitable crops to grow, and the periods during which each will be available.

Rye Sown in the Fall Will furnish the earliest feed in the spring, but as grass is usually abundant at that time, this crop is not likely to be needed, unless a complete system of soiling be practised. The clovers where they grow well come next on the list, and will provide an abundance of good feed during the latter half of June. Where it is possible to grow lucerne or alfalfa, it will be found the best of all soiling crops. It can be cut in the spring almost as early as rye, and yields at seed should be sown to the acre; if sown broadcast, double the amount. Dwarf Essex is the best variety. Rape produces large quantities of green feed, and is one of the best foods for keeping pigs, sheep and calves in good condition. It is not satisfactory for milk cows, owing to its tendency to injure the flavor of the milk.

Oats and Peas make one of the very best soiling crops for general growth, particularly for feeding calves and cows. They should be sown as early as possible in the spring, and at intervals thereafter, at the rate of about three bushels per acre (equal parts, or two bushels oats to one of peas). Vetches or tares are now grown in Canada to a considerable extent, particularly for dairymen. They are likely to prove of value in nearly all the provinces. The common spring vetch has been most generally grown, but recent experiments have shown that the hairy vetch will yield a much larger amount of green feed than any other species of rich feed. It is readily eaten by all kinds of live stock, but like other clovers it is apt to cause bloat if carelessly pastured. In Southern Ontario it usually stands the winter well, and lasts for years without reseeded. It should be sown in the spring, either alone or with a light nurse crop of barley, wheat or oats, and at least twenty pounds of fresh seed per acre. It is a little slow to gain a foothold, and should not be pastured the first year, but after that it is very tenacious of life, and withstands droughts particularly well.

Rape may be sown about the first of May for early feeding, and advantage will be made at intervals as desired. It is advisable to sow rape in drills about two feet apart, on rich, well prepared land, and to cultivate as for turnips, if drilled in one to two pounds of seed per acre in Ontario. The latter is very desirable for soiling especially in dry districts, and appears to be reliable by all classes of farm stock. Owing to the high price of the seed, it will probably be found best to sow vetches along with peas, at the rate of one bushel vetches, one bushel peas, and two bushels oats per acre. This mixture will produce an excellent crop for July and August feeding, and if cut early will afford good pasture afterwards.

Millet a Good Crop. Millet is another plant that particularly excels as a catch crop. It can sometimes be sown after a forage crop of peas and oats has been taken off the ground, and if there is moisture enough to start it, will yield a fair crop. If sown early in June, at the rate of about thirty pounds per acre, it will furnish a large crop of good fodder by the middle of August. The Japanese barnyard and Japanese Panicole are the best varieties, the former preferring a moist soil. Corn is, in most localities, the great standby for fall feeding. Another very valuable fall fodder plant for the Southern parts of Canada is sorghum. The Early Amber is the variety best suited to our latitude. It should not be sown until the weather has become drawn and warm on land that has been prepared in the same way as for corn. If sown in drills, three pecks of seed will be ample for an acre, but if broadcasted, more will be required. It is slow in starting, but after it has attained a height of a few inches growth is very rapid and the crop heavy. It is greedily eaten by stock, but like corn it is carbonaceous in its nature, and some additional feed such as clover or alfalfa, should be added to balance the ration. Sorghum or sorghum are also likely to prove valuable in the southern districts. They produce a large amount of forage of excellent character for cows at the rate of two to four pecks per acre. The Yellow Soy is the best variety for Canada, and is worthy of trial.

Telegraph Not Up on Classics. A well-known literary woman went over to Michigan last week to prepare her summer cottage for occupancy during the summer. Before going she made arrangements with her husband to have a lot of household goods packed and forwarded by steamer. For some reason the shipment was delayed, and she wrote inquiring the cause of the delay. "Please wire me when the goods have been shipped," she said in conclusion. The husband went hard to work and personally saw the books, hangings and other property packed for the trip. Then he went down to the dock and saw them safely on board the boat. Coming back from the river he stopped at a telegraph office and sent the message as requested. "Lares and Penates on board boat," he said. "Will arrive tomorrow morning." And this was the way in the little Michigan town. "Lard and peanuts on board boat. Will arrive tomorrow morning."—Chicago Tribune.

What the Coroner Discovered. I picked up a paper the other day, and found the following in it: The following was recently rendered in one of the counties of Indiana: "After having carefully examined the body, seen, heard and inspected the evidence adduced in the premises, I do find that the true and lawful name of said person is as above given, to wit: Andrew Mitz, that his age at the time of his death was 53 years, five feet and ten inches high, black hair and dark complexion, and that he came to his death as follows: After having the proper witnesses, which was a son of the deceased, I find that on the 14th day of February, A. D. 1903, and about 3 o'clock p. m., Mr. Mitz, having seen some water in his cellar thought he would walk out to the end of the cellar drain, which was perhaps a hundred yards away. After seeing the water coming out of the tile apparently alright, upon looking around he saw a rabbit sitting and went to the house after his gun, when he returned, the Rabbit had gone. So he went back and just before entering the house thought he would take the loaded shell from the gun, when by some means the gun went off. It clicked back and the stock of the gun hit him near the groin causing a severe morerage. He managed to get into the house and took his bed and died from the effects about 30 hours later. The accident was peculiar but fatal."

The Boy's Answer. Many years ago the Rev. Mr. Ritchie, of Tarbolton, and the Rev. Mr. Mackinlay, of Coynton, were examining the parish school of Annbank in religious knowledge, with the consent of the examination the word "mortal" occurred, and the class was asked to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and said he knew they would cure me. I secured a box and great was my surprise when I began to feel better after using only the one box. I continued their use until I had taken about four boxes which made me a sound man, and I also regained my usual weight, 190 pounds. I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which have done so much for me. I have recommended them to a number of my friends, and have never met with one case where they did not meet with good success. My daughter, Mrs. Charles Phillips, has also been cured of a severe stomach trouble by the use of these pills. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, 5 boxes for $1.00. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box of his remedies. "At this time my father-in-law,

BABY'S WELFARE

Every mother is anxious for the health and welfare of her little ones, and Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine to make baby well and keep it well. "Thousands of mothers keep the tablets constantly in the house—they say they would not be without them. As proof of this Mrs. Geo. Kilgore, Wellwood, Man., says: "Having used Baby's Own Tablets for some time, I can truthfully say that they are the best medicine I have ever used for little ones. I think so highly of the Tablets that I always keep them in the house." A medicine like Baby's Own Tablets, which so many mothers praise, is the right one for your little ones. They are guaranteed to contain neither opiates nor other harmful drugs, and can be given to the youngest infant with perfect safety. Good for teething troubles, constipation, diarrhoea, simple fevers, worms and all the minor ailments of children. Sold by druggists, or may be had by mail at 25 cents a box, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pains in the Back Hips and Spine

Great Suffering and Loss of Weight—Doctors Could Not Help Him—A Splendid Tribute to DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

When you read such letters as the following from well-known and highly respected people in all parts of the country you need no longer wonder why the sale of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is so far in advance of any similar remedy. When the people find out the virtue of this great medicine they tell their neighbors about it, and so the good news spreads. Mr. James Clark, Consecon, Prince Edward Co., Ont., states: "Eleven years ago I was taken with pains in my back, settling in my hips and extending up my spine. The pain was very severe, and at times almost unendurable, and many days I was not able to do an hour's work. My weight was reduced from 190 to 160 pounds, and though I had consulted many first-class physicians and tried several advertised medicines I could get no relief. "At this time my father-in-law,

T H I S O R I G I N A L D O C U M E N T I S I N E R Y P O R T