Ben Butler is a figure that belongs to the nation, and Americans from Atlantic to Pacific are interested in this unique American character. The New England Magazine has made an arrangement with the publishers of Hen Butler's autobiography, enabling it to publish extracts from the book in the October number, some months before the complete work will be given to the public. The chapter selected is called "Hen Butler's Buybond," and is especially interesting for its recollections of his youth and its glimpse of the formative influences of his early manhood, and its glimpse of the formative influences of his early manhood, and its contribution to the literature of the war.

Dear Sir.—You letter in re your Mineral Map of Nova Scotia, was read at this Board last evening, and the sample map examined. The Commissioners have agreed to tak six copies for departments of the Principal Schools.

H. J. WILSON, Secretary

We are pleased to notice the publication by A. F. Church, of a new map of Nova Scotia. It is, we think, the most accurate yet, and makes a speciality of indicating where valuable minerals are a located by about twenty different conspicuously colored or anaded marks. It is therefore well named, "Church's Minger and Map of Nova Scotia."
