ALL CASES OF

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.
HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

Having been entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

Five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain

Death of Father Ryan.

(A Toronto correspondent of the Montreal True Witness, writing under date of the 10th inst. contains the following account of the death of Father Ryan, who was well known here, having more than once preached retreats to the clergy of this diocese. He was attached to St. Dunstan's College when that institution was in charge of the Jesuits.)

St. John has Toronto been stepped in grief so profound and universal as that occasioned by the death of Rev. Father Ryan, rector of St. Michael's Cathedral. A favorite with all classes and creeds, and admired by all for his many grand qualities of heart and mind, his death has left a void apparently impossible to fill. From the time of his coming to Toronto, some eleven years ago, Father Ryan stood out, a conspicuous and colossal figure amongst the greatest of the Church's sons; his champion when necessary; his loyal son always; the earnest and eloquent exponent of her doctrines; one of the most gifted and brilliant of her ministers; a man profound as a thinker, a philosopher and preacher; one to whom all things came easily because of the versatility of his knowledge, the peer of the greatest of our scholars, he was excelled by none; the genial companion of his people in their joy, their sympathizer in their grief; the friend of all rich and poor alike; in short, he was "all things to all men" for the love of God.

For over a year Father Ryan had been falling in health, and while occasional periods of improvement gave hope to his friends for his complete recovery, Father Ryan himself knew that his summons was near at hand. Two weeks before his death he made his final dispositions, thus living up to what he had always preached,—not to delay until death was even at the door before making preparations to receive him.

On the Tuesday before his last call Father Ryan was stricken by paralysis, and conveyed at once to St. Michael's hospital, where he remained in an unconscious condition until the end on Saturday afternoon last. At the last moment Rev. Doctor Tracey, who had been his associate priest for several years at the Cathedral, and his director and friend during his last illness, was by his side to receive his last sigh and to accompany the departing soul with the blessing and prayers of the Church.

The remains were removed to St. Michael's Palace, where the reception room had been transformed into a temporary mortuary chapel. Heavily shrouded windows closed out the light of day; mourning drapings hid the pictures and brightly colored walls, lights from six tall candlesticks mingled with the lesser gleams from silver candelabra; the emblem of salvation and the signs of the priestly office were all about and about in alb, chasuble and biretta, his hands clasping the cross and beads, Father Ryan lay while people passed in a continuous procession to say a last farewell, to recite a last prayer, to take a long, last look.

On Monday afternoon the body of Father Ryan was moved to the Cathedral and laid in state in the midst of the chancel. The large and beautiful Church was in full mourning garb. The back of the altar and lower large windows were completely veiled in black drapings, upon which the tall white crosses showed out in bold relief. Long lengths in black and white ought and held in position at regular intervals by drooping funeral scarfs, stretched the whole length of the vaulted ceiling. Pillars, pulpit, altar, railing and gallery were all heavily draped, the funeral darkness being relieved only by the occasional white and the gleam of the waxen tapers.

In the evening the coffin for the dead was sung by Very Rev. Vicar-General McCann, assisted by many of the priests of the diocese and the Brothers of the schools, while a fine choir assisted from the gallery. The Church was crowded, and the solemn stillness of the great congregation, the earnest and broken voices that answered the beads when Rev. Doctor Tracey said them from the pulpit, the thousands who afterwards crowded the aisles and approached the sanctuary to gaze for a last time on the once animated features, now cold and silent, spoke more eloquently than words of the great grief and loss.

On Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock the Mass of Requiem was sung; the celebrant was the Vicar-General of the diocese, Very Rev. J. J. McCann, assisted by Rev. Father Rob- loder and Rev. Father Trayling as deacon and subdeacon. His Grace Archbishop O'Connor was present in the sanctuary, in cope and mitre, officiated at the Throne. Rev. Doctor Tracey was master of ceremonies.

The priests of the diocese, robed in their black cassocks and white surplices, filed the sanctuary, rising from its sides tier upon tier, testifying by their presence—many having come a considerable distance—of their love and respect for their dead brother. The scene particularly at the Gospel and Communion, was most solemn and impressive. The semi-darkness of the vast building, for even the sun refused to shine and came in but fitfully, the huge and silent throng of worshippers, the banks of white robed priests each holding a gleaming silver light, the gorgeous yet sombre vestments of the Archbishop and officiating priests; the solemn tones of the organ; the dirge-like cry of the "Dies Irae," the cry to heaven for mercy and—the silent figure, the cause of all, yet itself takes no part, save what the eloquence of its silence taught.

According to the wish of Father Ryan no sermon was preached, but the Archbishop while complying with this request, asked the people, particularly the Sacred Heart League, and other societies for which Father Ryan had been director, to remember him in their prayers, and to offer special communion in his behalf. Many kind things, said the Archbishop, might be said of Father Ryan, but his last wish must be respected, and they must remain unsaid. The Archbishop then gave his last absolution, after which amidst the prayers and tears of those present, the procession was formed and guarded on either side by his brother priests, the remains were borne down the aisle, followed by the large concourse of mourners. The long funeral cortege to St. Michael's cemetery was taken part in by members of the A. O. U. E. C. M. B. A., B. U., and other societies, with which the late rector had been connected. The rain was falling gently as the procession left the Church, even nature seeming to join in the general mourning for the dear dead priest. May he rest in peace.
