SATURDAY, August 5, 1911.

Under the Maple Leaf. Canada's Own.

So situated is Newfoundland in the Canadian Atlantic Station, which is referred to in the Naval Agreement as Canada's "own," that no steamer could leave any port in Newfoundland or the Labrador and steam outside the limits of the Canadian Atlantic Station without crossing at least a thousand miles of water. This may make clear the situation of Newfoundland in relation to this zone which the Canadian Government will have as its own naval station.

The strategic advantage of Newfoundland to Canada was set forth in the quotation we made yesterday from an address of Mr. Morine delivered to the Canadian Club at Winnipeg after he took up his residence at Toronto. So elucidating is it to the Canadian policy which has given rise to this Agreement that we quote it again.

"One of the chief reasons for this amalgamation was that of defence. An enemy controlling Newfoundland would also control all the shipping trade of the Dominion. The Government sitting at Ottawa in time of war would realize fully the desirability of control."

This reasoning also supplies a key to the opinion of Mr. Morine that Union should be brought about even if force had to be used.

And this agreement recognizes the acquisition of whatever naval forces Canada deems necessary for her purposes and the exercise of whatever authority she finds desirable for the execution of her schemes of defence over the wide expanse of the Atlantic extending from the coasts of the Labrador, Newfoundland, Quebec and Nova Scotia half way across the Atlantic and as far south as Bermuda.

This policy is in accord with what has been going on for years, after Canada's refusal to join in the policy of One Flag, One Army and One Navy. Evidences of this policy are to be seen in the departure of Imperial troops from Canada, the transfer of military and naval works at Halifax and elsewhere to the Dominion Government, and the withdrawal of the North American squadron from these same waters. These all foreshadowed what is contemplated in this agreement, and what the London Globe reports Premier Laurier as declaring, viz., that these ocean zones, viz., the Canadian Pacific Station and the Canadian Atlantic Station "shall be absolutely under Canada's own care."

They are, moreover, all in line with the evolution of Canada as a nation which is practically independent, and which has been expressed by Sir Wilfred Laurier in the following words:—

"We acknowledge the authority of the British Crown, but no other authority."

By this expression he means that Canada does not acknowledge the authority of the Imperial Parliament or the Imperial Government, for this opinion must be read with the explanation he gave on another occasion that

"the King of England has no more rights over us than are allowed him by our own Canadian parliament."

In other words, Canada is recognized as having power to do as she pleases, in war as well as in peace, so far as the utilization of naval forces goes, and in conceding this, practically everything is conceded.

To sum up, Canada has obtained naval control over Newfoundland and its waters. She obtained this at the Imperial Conference attended by Premier Morris and Colonial Secretary Watson. It was the greatest asset with which Newfoundland had to bargain should adversity ever force to the front negotiations for union. Now, however, Canada has obtained what she most desired of Newfoundland, and for nothing so far as this agreement discloses.

An explanation is in order and has now been repeatedly asked for since Tuesday. Yet Premier Morris remains silent. Why is he dumb?

The silence is giving rise to a suspicion that there is more behind these matters than has yet been disclosed.

STILL THEY COME. — The S. S. Florizel left New York to-day with a full number of saloon passengers — nearly all on the round trip.

Should Go to Bed at 10

Sleep is Soundest From Then Until Half-past Eleven.

A scientific investigation of the progress of sleep of the normal person has resulted in the production of a depth of sleep chart, which shows graphically, almost like a fever chart, how the depth of sleep varies with the different hours of the night. It is suggested that the right time to go to bed is 10 o'clock. If a man or woman retires at that hour the intensity of sleep and soundness of repose increases gradually until 11 o'clock. Then suddenly sleep becomes very profound, and by 11.30 at its soundest. By 11.45 it begins to decrease slightly, and at 12.30 is about the same as at 11.15. The soundness of slumber then gradually decreases until 2.30, when it increases again slightly, but at 4 begins to decrease in soundness until it gradually tapers down to wakefulness at 6 o'clock, when the normal person who retired at 10 is supposed to get up.
