Editor Evening Telegram.

The Sir—The editorial on "Walls and Straws" in Friday's Telegram must commend itself to every thinking person. It is manifestly absurd to provide dinners for children in other lands when your own children are starving at home. It is equally absurd to contribute towards the Bernardo Homes when we badly need such an institution ourselves. About this time last year, if you will remember, the houses of prostitution cases, were on, in two of which I figured, and His Honor, Judge Morris, who has done such excellent work in reclaiming many who otherwise would have been lost to humanity, ordered that the inmates of these houses leave, and in a letter to the Telegram, stated that the Judge's decision did not go far enough because the Judge did not say where they were to go after they had left. They could not leave the country, no one would employ them, no respectable home was open to them, they had to leave, they must get money, and there was only one way for them to get it and so they had to go back to similar houses and again take to the path which no doubt they did. That is the state of affairs in the town today and the consequences are terrible to contemplate. We isolate cases of diphtheria and smallpox. The effect of these cases are not nearly as pernicious as these of which I am writing, which keeps on enlarging until the whole ocean has been moved. We have sons and daughters growing up. Are they safe? Are we doing what we ought to keep them safe? We are not. We are doing practically nothing. Lately a band of noble people have taken the first steps to deal with the situation but they are short of funds and almost everything else. These people should be helped in their godly work. Before considering helping the Bernardo Homes learn the needs of these people and after helping them if you have the money to spare then help outsiders. The Judge is compelled to send an unfortunate girl to the penitentiary. When she comes out where is she going. No home will receive her. As before she cannot starve. Only one course is open. She must go back to where she came from, to degradation and death. How many would be saved and reclaimed if there was a proper institution to which the Judge might send them. Take the case of young boys who hardly know they are doing wrong. The Judge has to send them to the prison with criminals of the most hardened type. They are at the most impressionable age. What they learn during their incarceration is never forgotten. Instead of being benefitted they are destroyed. The chances are ten to one against their ever becoming any value as citizens whereas were there a reformatory where they might be corrected, disciplined, taught a trade, they might become useful citizens and an asset to the country. Remember this, we have to pay. We either pay for a reformatory or a prison. We are making assets or liabilities. Are we spending the money judiciously? Think it out. Let us then do as Judge Morris so often has suggested. Put up a place where these erring girls, women and boys can once more be made into successful citizens. Having done that let us turn our attention to a better path namely starting at the source and endeavoring to alleviate the improper conditions under which children are born, reared, educated and brought up and reduce to a minimum the cause, the effects of which are to-day being in our police courts, our penitentiaries, our poor houses and our asylums.

Let us honour those who are working towards that end. The Childs Welfare, The Industrial Home Workers, etc. and then we shall have less need for the Dorcas and the St. Vincent de Paul Societies.

Yours sincerely,
Sept. 26, 1921. GEO. W. R. AYRE.

Just Folks

THE SILENT VOICE.

The voice is mute; the singer is forgot; The curtain falls, the actor's art has fled. In memory survive these glorious dead. Where all they did to comfort men cannot.

The soldier falls, but still above his grave The starry banner flies for men to save.

A shining symbol of man's liberty, That flag is ours because the lad was brave.

Each leaves his symbol when his work is done, Some marked by steel and some by finished stone; By something real the worth of man is known. To win the praise of those who follow on.

But when the voice of sweetness fades away Men may remember, for a little while, The songs which set their spirits all a-swing. But music passes with its hours of day.

BETTER DAYS.

When young I worried under the ill that children know; my colic was a wonder; I had nine mumps or so. Then grandma made me swallow a stoup of castor oil; and life seemed vain and hollow, a thing of tears and toll. If sickness was disaster, the remedy was worse; the taste of oil of castor long weeks could not disperse. Then all our pills and potions refused to wear disguise, and they stirred up emotions this age can't realize. Then every ailing critter was doomed to drink a tea made up of yarbs as bitter as any yarbs can be. But science is a dandy, its triumphs never stop; our pills are now like candy, our bitter taste like pop. They used to hold our noses and pry our jaws apart, to pour down noxious doses designed to break the heart. The old time methods savored of martyr at the stake, but now our dope is flavored like icing on a cake. And thus the world grows brighter in big and little ways, our burdens all grow lighter, and sunnier our days. My heart is light and tuneful, and full of glee I am, as I consume a spoonful of dope that tastes like jam.
